Dell : XPS M1710

Every so often a piece of kit comes along that just blows you away. We have seen Dells Inspiron XPS laptops before and they have been impressive. The latest, the M1710, really is something else. The It is very different in appearance to the rest of the Dell laptop range. Its powerful, too; in fact its one of the most powerful notebooks currently available and comes in two colours - Metallic Black or Formula Red - and, as is becoming for a member of the XPS clan, enough lights to shame a Christmas tree. The design of the notebook is what you could call "funky industrial" with the metallic black lid inlay neatly set off by the metallic silver surround. Its a tough beast as well, with a magnesium alloy chassis, steel lid hinges and thick plastic palm wrists!

Dell : XPS M2010

In just seconds, your XPST M2010 turns from a stylish and portable briefcase with a leather-like back, gloss accents, and lines and curves like a fine sports car, into a complete entertainment centre. The XPS M2010 is built to entertain, bringing together 20.1-inches of widescreen viewing, built-in high-definition audio and a variety of high-performance components. Movies, music, TV and more, the XPS M2010 redefines mobile entertainment, using the latest technology to deliver a multimedia experience unlike any other.
