Even before the opening ceremonies on Thursday night, the lines were beginning to form as festival-goers chose what to eat from an astonishing variety of choices.

Monsignor John Bendik, pastor of the Parish Community of St. John the Evangelist in Pittston, opened the 28th annual festival with a prayer and led the audience in an a cappella rendition of the national anthem.

Various dignitaries including state Rep. Mike Carroll and state Sen. John Yudichak spoke to the crowd. Yudichak alluded to the recently announced grants for downtown development in Pittston.

Mayor Jason Klush, referring to the Main Street revitalization project, said, "Next year, downtown will be gorgeous."

After the opening ceremonies, Lori Nocito, festival chairwoman, said 30 volunteers had worked together to make the festival happen. One of them, Tom Sewatsky, the festival treasurer, has worked on all 28 festivals.

Nocito said the real attraction of the festival was the variety of food.

"What draws people is our homemade Italian foods like ravioli, tripe, bruschetta and eggplant rollatini."

Nocito cited a June article in Parade Magazine that listed the

Gunmen slay 8 in Israel

Defense forces retaliate with a ground attack and airstrikes, killing militants.

EILAT, Israel — Gunmen who crossed from the Egyptian desert launched a series of attacks Thursday in southern Israel, killing eight people and threatening to destabilize a volatile border region that includes the Hamas-ruled Gaza Strip and the increasingly lawless Sinai Peninsula.

Israel blamed an armed Palestinian group from neighboring Gaza. Israeli forces killed five of the gunmen along the border with Egypt, the military said, and later launched an airstrike inside Gaza that killed five other militants from the same group as well as a child.

Three blasts shook Gaza early today, including one that killed a 13-year-old boy, according to a Gaza hospital official. But the Israeli military did not immediately confirm reports of three more airstrikes targeting a security compound, a home and the area of the smuggling tunnels crisscrossing the Gaza-Egypt border.

The Israeli military said three of the men

Computer glitch hits LCCC students

NANTICOKE – A double-whammy computer problem at a bad time of the year left online students at Luzerne County Community College scrambling to resubmit work and retake final exams earlier this month.

The Times Leader received multiple complaints about the problem. Students who asked not to publish their names talked of difficulty connecting via email to instructors, not knowing exactly what was going on, and being forced to retake tests after they thought the course had ended and some assumed they could take a short vacation.

After storm, Broyans bring wares to Square

WILKES-BARRE – Albert Broyan couldn't believe what he was seeing. In 30 minutes, nearly an entire season's worth of hard work was wiped out by a freak hail storm that struck his Nescopeck Township farm on Saturday.

With pounds upon pounds of watermelon, squash, cantaloupe, zucchini and peppers among the ruined crops, Broyan and his family picked up the pieces, literally, and went to the farmers markets in Scranton on Monday and Wilkes-Barre on Thursday.

The crops picked prior to the storm, which packed enough punch to take down a shed and topple multiple fruit trees, were sold along with other crops spared by the storm.

What Broyan is going through because of unusually harsh weather is something other farmers cross their fingers and pray doesn't happen to them.

Broyan said the family and farm workers "scavenged" for whatever they could to bring to the markets this week, and he said that while the variety will be limited, he expects to sell at markets the rest of the season.

Broyan, 72, said crops that were under the ground when the storm hit, including onions, red beets and potatoes, will be continue to be available.

U.S., allies want Syrian leader out

The unified stance isolates Assad further as he presses against demonstrations.

By MATTHEW LEE
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Executing a global squeeze play, the United States and its European allies on Thursday demanded an end to four decades of brutal family dictatorship in Syria and underscored the tough talk with new sanctions on President Bashar Assad's government.

The unified stance isolates Assad further as he presses a military campaign against major demonstrations. But the diplomacy left many questions unanswered, including how the demand for Assad's ouster can be backed up in the absence of any appetite for military intervention, and who inside the Syrian government or among the country's fragmented opposition might take his place.

The messages from Washington, London, Paris, Berlin and Brussels coincided with a U.N. report recommending that Syria be referred to the International Criminal Court for investigation of possible crimes against humanity, including summary executions, torturing prisoners and targeting children in the crackdown on demonstrations.

Much of Syria was quiet Thursday, although activists reported intense shooting around noon in the flashpoint city of Latakia.

Rights groups say Assad's forces have killed nearly 2,000 people since mid-March. The military assault on civilians has escalated since Ramadan began, with security forces killing hundreds and detaining thousands.

"Bashar al-Assad's regime has committed terrible violence against the Syrian people, whose only demands have been basic human rights and democratic representation," said U.S. Sen. Bob Casey. "As Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Near Eastern and South and Central Asian Affairs, I have been outspoken against the brutality perpetrated by Assad's regime. On August 2, at the confirmation hearing for U.S. Ambassador to Syria Robert Ford, I publicly called for Assad to leave office and for the U.S. to impose additional sanctions on the regime. Today, the Obama Administration announced that Assad must step aside and allow the people of Syria to determine their country's future. I support the Administration's decision to impose new sanctions and asset freezes in order to further isolate Assad's brutal regime.

"The international community must continue to pressure Assad to step down. Our allies in the Arab League and Turkey have extensive diplomatic and economic ties to Syria, and can exert a powerful influence on Assad's regime. I strongly encourage members of the international community to lend their voices to this growing chorus, and publicly declare their opposition to the Assad regime and its brutal treatment of the Syrian people."

Activists said security forces killed 18 people across the country on Wednesday, the same day Assad assured U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon that military and police operations had stopped.

Brain twisters

By CAMILLE FIOTI
Times Leader Correspondent

PITTSTON – Proving learning can be fun, about a dozen members of the Teen Advisory Group or "TAG," stretched their limbs and brains Thursday afternoon while playing North American Twister at the Pittston Memorial Library.

In keeping with the library's teen reading program theme, "You are Here," which explores travel and world cultures, the game tested the teens' knowledge of North America.

In a back room, two Twister game mats covered the floor. Small pieces of paper taped over each colored circle asked questions such as "What does Cinco de Mayo mean?" and "What is the largest lake in Canada?"

Patricia Joyce, a member of the library staff, and Patrick Joyce, 15, no relation to Patricia, flicked each of the two spinners, as players of the two teams simultaneously placed a hand or foot on the appropriate circle. The object of the game was to answer the question correctly, which allowed the player to remain on the game mat.

Ali Quinn, 17, of Avoca, said the advisory group was formed last fall with about six members and has doubled since then.

"We meet once a month and try to come up with ways to get teens into the library. We find fun things to plan," said the soon-to-be-senior at Pittston Area High School.

Placing his left hand on a blue circle, Joseph DeMace, 13, of Dupont, said the group has regular game nights during which they play Wii and X-Box. During a Clue game day, members dressed as Clue characters.

"We even had a scavenger hunt," he said.

As a member of TAG, which meets once a month, teens earn special privileges such as choosing new books, magazines and movies for the library. Patrick, who'll be entering the ninth grade at Pittston Area, said he joined the group last fall as a way to meet new friends.

"It's just fun," he said. "It gives you something to do. Instead of just sitting on your couch at home, you get to be with your friends. It's a good time."

The Teen Advisory Group is open to students in grades six through 12.

Judge cleared in case of condom-filled acorns

The Associated Press

HARRISBURG — A central Pennsylvania judge who gave two women condom-stuffed acorns has been cleared of violating judicial conduct standards.

The Intelligencer Journal/Lancaster New Era reported the state Court of Judicial Discipline dismissed the case against Magisterial District Judge Isaac Stoltzfus.

The court ruling issued Wednesday said that while the incident does not qualify as a violation, "it certainly lacks good judgment and must not be repeated."

The court also wrote that Stoltzfus' "preoccupation with acorns is mystifying."

The Judicial Conduct Board filed a complaint against Stoltzfus after he offered the acorns to two women outside the Capitol in September. The hollowed-out nuts contained unwrapped condoms.

Stoltzfus is a judge in the town of Intercourse but was attending a seminar in Harrisburg.

Light of faith shines across the sea

Local youth connect with friends abroad

By STEVE MOCARSKY
smocarsky@timesleader.com

NANTICOKE – The bells of St. Faustina's rang loud and long Thursday afternoon, as the parish joined its youth representatives half a world away in celebrating the arrival of Pope Benedict XVI at World Youth Day in Madrid, Spain.

Four youth directors from the parish accompanied 16 youth ministry members ages 15 to 24 on a pilgrimage for the celebration that occurs at a different world location every three years.

Pope Benedict is presiding over nine major events with young people during four days of World Youth Day celebrations, including a prayer vigil and a closing Mass on Sunday that's expected to draw more than a million people.

The Pope was greeted by thousands packing the streets of Madrid and ringing bells throughout Spain's capital city.

Bishop Joseph Bambera of the Diocese of Scranton said in a phone interview that World Youth Day gives the youth "an incredible opportunity to really come to appreciate the global nature (and) unity of their church and hopefully carry it with them the rest of their lives."

Bambera celebrated a Send-Off Mass at St. Peter's Cathedral in Scranton on Aug. 10 for all diocese youth making the pilgrimage. He said three Pike County churches had "a nice representation" at the Mass while St. Faustina's had the "lion's share of participants."

Council candidate files for bankruptcy

Virgil Argenta is thousands of dollars behind on his real estate taxes.

By BILL O'BOYLE
boboyle@timesleader.com

WILKES-BARRE – A candidate for City Council has filed for bankruptcy and is thousands of dollars behind on his real estate taxes.

Argenta

According to Luzerne County records, Virgil and Victoria Argenta, 345 N. Main St., made the filing on Aug. 1. Virgil Argenta is the Republican candidate for City Council in District E. He is running against incumbent Democrat Mike Merritt.

Argenta did not return numerous messages left on his cell phone this week. Merritt, seeking his second four-year term, declined to comment on the story.

The Times Leader reported last week that eight properties were pulled from the most recent back-tax sale in Luzerne County because the owners filed for bankruptcy. John Rogers, owner of Northeast Revenue Services LLC, the county's tax claim operator, said bankruptcy filings are common before tax sales as people try to hold onto their properties.

Included in the filings was a single-family home and apartment building, both on North Main Street in Wilkes-Barre that were removed from the sale when the Argentas filed for bankruptcy. The two properties had been listed because the Argentas owe a combined $21,920 in school, county and local taxes from 2008 through 2010.

The bankruptcy filing states that $33,126 in taxes is owed on 14 properties owned by the couple.

The properties owned by the Argentas and the back taxes owed just to the city are:

- 357 N. Main St., $1,700.69 for years 2008, 2009 and 2010.
- 280 N. Main St., $1,904.64 for years 2009 and 2010.

In the May primary election, Argenta was unopposed in the GOP race. He received 128 votes to earn the nomination.

Merritt defeated Democratic challenger Darren Snyder, 464 votes to 204.

During the primary campaign, Argenta, 50, said he was the owner of Wayne Fuel Co. Inc., Argenta Rentals and V.D.V. Enterprises.

Judge allows Stubbs time to fix two errors

Convicted murderer seeks dismissal of charges filed against him, alleging a non-diverse jury heard his case.

By SHEENA DELAZIO
sdelazio@timesleader.com

WILKES-BARRE – A Luzerne County senior judge said Thursday he would give a convicted murderer time to correct errors on a petition he filed in which he seeks the dismissal of charges filed against him based on an alleged non-diverse jury that heard his case.

Senior Judge Kenneth Brown, in a video conference held Thursday with Henry Stubbs, who is serving two life sentences at the State Correctional Institution at Huntingdon, said he would give Stubbs time to fix two errors.

Stubbs, 46, was convicted in May 2003 of two counts of first-degree murder in the December 2001 slayings of 33-year-old Elena Herring and her daughter, Viktoria Ivanova, 6, in their Wilkes-Barre home.

Stubbs, in a Post Conviction Collateral Relief filing in June, asked that charges against him be dismissed because his attorneys at the time of his 2003 trial were "ineffective" and he has evidence that "Luzerne County officials systematically and purposely excluded minorities from jury's where the defendants facing criminal charges were black."

Stubbs

Brown said Stubbs, who is representing himself in the petition, has 60 days to amend his original filing.

Brown said there are two concerns that need to be addressed: That Stubbs' filing was made over the allotted time period after his first and original post conviction filing in November 2009, and that he needs to tell Brown the name and addresses of witnesses who can back up his claims, as well as what they would testify to.

Brown said that after Stubbs makes corrections to his filing and prosecutors respond, he will schedule a hearing for Stubbs and Assistant District Attorney Frank Barletta to argue the petition.

After that hearing, Brown said, he could hold another hearing in which evidence is presented or make a ruling on Stubbs' request.

Stubbs said he would also be filing a petition to have a demographics expert appointed to prove his case.

In his filing, Stubbs alleges Luzerne County used an "all-white jury" to convict him, and his attorneys failed to raise challenges to a "racially discriminatory" jury selection.

Stubbs made a similar claim in a March federal lawsuit in which he and three other black men who were convicted of crimes in Luzerne County allege their constitutional rights were violated because people of their race and other minorities were excluded from the jury pool that heard their cases.

The suit alleges the officials conspired with each other to exclude blacks and Hispanics from the jury pool, denying them their constitutional rights to have a jury that consists of a fair cross-section of the community.

Stubbs has previously appealed his conviction and sentence to higher Pennsylvania courts, all of which were denied except an appeal that is pending in federal court where Stubbs alleges he had an ineffective counsel and an unfair jury pool.

Fair probe raises questions

Indiana's decision to essentially police itself as it investigates a fatal stage collapse at the state fair is raising questions about how objective the probe will be.

Workplace safety agencies, state police and fair officials are looking into Saturday's collapse that killed five people and injured dozens more. All are under the jurisdiction of the state, which also put on the fair. The lone outside agency brought in so far is an engineering firm hired by the Indiana State Fair Commission, raising questions about its independence.

Other states in similar positions have formed special commissions with outside experts to handle investigations, including of a bonfire collapse at Texas A&M University and the Columbine High School shootings in Colorado.

Storm kills 3 at festival

A storm swept through a popular open-air music festival in this town eastern Belgium on Thursday killing at least three people and injuring more than 70 others, an official said.

Ambulances and police cars raced to and from the site of the Pukkelpop festival, near the town of Hasselt, 50 miles east of Brussels, late Thursday, their sirens blaring. Concertgoers described scenes of panic as the sky darkened, the winds whipped, rain poured and hailstones nearly half an inch in size pelted the crowds, and concert structures buckled.

Hugo Simons, Hasselt's head of emergency medical planning, told VRT radio that three people had died, 11 had been severely injured and 60 had sustained light injuries as a result of the storm.

Girlfriend pleads not guilty

James "Whitey" Bulger's girlfriend, who is accused of helping the reputed former crime boss elude authorities during 16 years on the run together, will not cooperate with law enforcement authorities in their case against him, her lawyer said Thursday.

Catherine Greig's lawyer, Kevin Reddington, made the remark after Greig pleaded not guilty in federal court to a charge of conspiracy to harbor and conceal a fugitive.

Prosecutors say Greig actively helped Bulger escape capture, but her attorney says she was in love with Bulger and wasn't aware of the extent of Bulger's alleged crimes when she fled with him in 1995. Bulger is accused of participating in 19 murders while heading up Boston's notorious Winter Hill Gang.

The couple were apprehended in Santa Monica, Calif., in June, more than 16 years after Bulger fled.

Legionnaires cases triple

Cases of Legionnaires' disease have tripled in the last decade, U.S. health officials said Thursday, but the risk of dying from it is lower because of more effective treatment.

Legionnaires most often strikes the elderly and can cause deadly pneumonia. The germ spreads through mist or vapor from contaminated water or air conditioning systems.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reports 3,522 cases in 2009, the most since Legionnaires was first identified in 1976. There were only 1,110 cases in 2000. CDC officials think the increase may be partly because there are more old people.

President starts his vacation

Obama arrives at Martha's Vineyard for 10 days with family amid controversy.

By ERICA WERNER
Associated Press

WEST TISBURY, Mass — President Barack Obama ditched the Beltway grind Thursday to seek the pleasures of summer on the beaches of Martha's Vineyard, his leisure time competing with a stock market plunge, fears of global recession and restless voters demanding jobs.

The president arrived on this wealthy Massachusetts island retreat Thursday afternoon, where he was joining first lady Michelle Obama and their daughters, Sasha and Malia. They are to spend 10 days in a rented compound.

The departure came after a busy morning in which the president called for Syrian President Bashar Assad to step down and imposed sanctions on the beleaguered Mideast regime. He then met with members of his economic team, which is preparing a jobs package that the president intends to announce shortly after Labor Day.

Republicans complained that the president should stay in Washington to work on the faltering economy.

Criticism of presidential vacations seems unavoidable, but this time Obama leaves with the economy in a particularly precarious state. Morgan Stanley economists warned Thursday that the U.S. and European economies are "dangerously close" to a recession, and Gallup this week put Obama at the lowest approval rating of his presidency in terms of handling the economy — a measly 26 percent.

Aruba suspect tried to redeem $1.5 million policy

A Maryland man is detained in the disappearance of his travel friend.

By BEN FOX
Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — A Maryland man detained in Aruba in the presumed death of his travel partner had an accidental-death insurance policy on her for $1.5 million and sought to claim the money two days after reporting her missing, a person who provided information to the investigation has told The Associated Press.

The details of the policy obtained by Gary V. Giordano before his trip to Aruba may help explain why he has been detained on suspicion of involvement in the death of Robyn Gardner during their short getaway to the Dutch Caribbean island.

Gardner

The person with knowledge of the policy told the AP that Giordano purchased a $1.5 million American Express Travel Insurance policy shortly before he left for Aruba and that the accidental-death benefit covered only the length of their short trip.

The source told the AP that Giordano called the insurance company on Aug. 4, while the search for Gardner was still going on. He sought to confirm that the documents listing him as the insurance beneficiary had been received and wanted to begin redeeming the policy.

This person also said that records indicate Giordano asked whether any search costs would be covered by the policy.

The source did not have authorization to publicly release the information and agreed to speak with the AP only on condition of anonymity.

Giordano, a 50-year-old business owner from Gaithersburg, Maryland, traveled to Aruba with Gardner on July 31 and reported her missing two days later.

Rebels claiming control of refinery

Latest move in Libya is blow to Moammar Gadhafi's regime in week of losses.

By KARIN LAUB and BASSAM HATOUM
Associated Press

ZINTAN, Libya — Opposition fighters in Libya's western mountains claimed control Thursday of the country's last functioning oil refinery, a blow to Moammar Gadhafi's regime in a week of stunning rebel advances that could turn the tide of the 6-month-old civil war.

The refinery is located in the strategic city of Zawiya, where rebels have made great strides in battles with government forces since their initial assault on Saturday.

"We have full control over the Zawiya oil refinery and we have liberated the whole city except two main streets."
Col. Ali Ahrash
Opposition fighter

"We have full control over the Zawiya oil refinery and we have liberated the whole city except two main streets," Col. Ali Ahrash told The Associated Press.

The BBC reported that one of its news crews was taken around the refinery by rebels and that there was no sign of pro-Gadhafi troops.

A rebel victory in Zawiya could leave Gadhafi nearly cornered in his increasingly isolated stronghold of Tripoli, the capital, just 30 miles to the east along the Mediterranean coast.

Rebel fighters are now closing in on the capital from the west and the south, while NATO controls the seas to the north. The opposition is in control of most of the eastern half of the country and has declared Benghazi, 620 miles (1,000 kilometers) east of Tripoli, as its de facto capital.

Ahrash, who was in Benghazi, said rebels have control of the cities of Surman, Sabratha and Zwara, as well as the road to Tunisia from Tripoli.

Families fleeing their homes to avoid a possible rebel assault on Tripoli described growing tensions and deteriorating living conditions in the capital: Security forces have blanketed the city with checkpoints, gun battles are heard after nightfall and power outages last days.

Five loud explosions shook the center of Tripoli on Thursday afternoon, possibly striking near Gadhafi's compound. NATO jets flew overhead minutes after the blasts.

School bomb suspect had earlier run-ins

Tampa Police Chief Jane Castor gives a briefing on Jared Cano, charged with plotting a school attack.

Bomb materials and detailed plans were found in Jared Cano's room.

By MITCH STACY and TAMARA LUSH

TAMPA, Fla. — Two years before he was accused of plotting to bomb his high school, Jared Cano confronted police with a metal baseball bat when they came to his apartment looking for a stolen pistol, which they eventually found in his bedroom. He was 15 at the time, but already had several run-ins with police.

Cano's troubled history is outlined in police reports released after investigators uncovered what they say was a plan to attack the Tampa school that expelled him. None of the previous juvenile charges — from burglary to firearm possession — ended in a conviction.

Yet it appears that this week's bomb plot went beyond angry teenage bluster: Detectives said Cano had amassed shrapnel, plastic tubing, timing and fuse devices for pipe bombs. The attack plan investigators found on Tuesday was mapped out minute-by-minute.

Experts say the level of preparation shows how serious he was.

"Ninety-nine percent of the population who fantasize about harming someone because they are frustrated, or for whatever reason, don't actually make plans to carry it out," said Charles A. Williams, a Drexel University psychology professor and expert on violent youth.

School safety expert Kenneth S. Trump agreed that the written plans showed a "high probability" that Cano would have carried out an attack.

"The good news is that since Columbine we still see kids coming forward to report the threats and the plots, such as in this case," said Trump, president of Cleveland-based National School Safety and Security Services.

Tampa investigators were tipped off Tuesday that Cano was plotting to bomb Freedom High School, and they thought the information was plausible enough to search the apartment where he lived with his mother. Cano's past run-ins with the law had earned him a court-ordered curfew and a place on a police watch list.

Baker briefs on redistricting

State senator visits Kingston Senior Center to talk about issues.

By BILL O'BOYLE
boboyle@timesleader.com

KINGSTON – State Sen. Lisa Baker on Thursday told a group of senior citizens that she might be losing 19,000 constituents when Pennsylvania's legislative redistricting is completed.

A member of the Senate Aging and Youth Committee, the Lehman Township Republican covered a lot of issues Thursday with about 40 people at the center and answered their questions and concerns.

Baker said the Legislative Reapportionment Commission met Wednesday to begin the state's redistricting process. State House and Senate districts will be re-drawn, as will Pennsylvania's 18 U.S. Congressional districts.

"The Pittsburgh area will lose a senatorial district and a new one will be added in either the Poconos or in Lancaster/Chester counties," Baker said. "Each senatorial district has about 250,000 residents."

She said the commission has up to 90 days to adopt a preliminary plan. After that is adopted, there is a 30-day period for public comment during which public hearings will be held across the state, Baker said.

The Legislative Reapportionment Commission voted unanimously to certify the 2010 census numbers for the purpose of redrawing state House and Senate districts to compensate for state population shifts since 2000.

Baker said the panel has to approve final maps for the 2012 elections — by mid-January, if all the days allotted by the state constitution are used.

The five-member commission also approved a first-ever interactive website dedicated to redistricting. The site – www.redistricting.state.pa.us – will be administered by the Legislative Processing Center.

PETE G. WILCOX/THE TIMES LEADER

State Sen. Lisa Baker, left, meets with Dorothy Cooper of Kingston on Thursday at the Kingston Senior Center, where she addressed current issues.

John O'Rourke, 73, of Kingston, a self-appointed volunteer liaison between the regular visitors to the Kingston Senior Center and elected state officials, was front and center Thursday when Baker gave a legislative update on issues that most affect senior citizens.

"Sen. Baker listens to what we have to say and gives us answers," said O'Rourke, who is retired from Acme Markets after 40 years. "When she's not here I e-mail her with questions and concerns that people tell me and I report back with her answers."

Frank Warunek, 71, of Dupont, told Baker he is opposed to allowing Sunday hunting in Pennsylvania. "I'd like to have one day to go looking for mushrooms or hiking without having to wear fluorescent orange or worry about getting shot," Warunek said. "I'd like to feel safe at least one day during the week."

Baker said there are people who feel they are losing their sporting heritage because they are unable to hunt on Sundays. She said a compromise may be to allow Sunday hunting only on state gamelands.

"You can't beat having the opportunity to talk to your state senator person to person," Warunek said.

Ann Reed, who visits the Kingston Center daily, said she enjoys the programs and the activities, like bingo.

"I like what Sen. Baker had to say," Reed said. "A lot of other elected officials should do the same. I like that she asks our opinion and I believe she listens."

Baker also discussed:

• Act 21 of 2011 (House Bill 463). It created a moratorium on increases in income due to a Social Security cost-of-living adjustment for certain individuals enrolled in PACE and PACENET. It was signed into law June 30, 2001.

• Senate Bill 629 (a priority this fall), and Baker is a co-sponsor. The bill seeks to expand the scope of the Family Caregiver Support Program to include reimbursements for non-relative caregivers and increases reimbursement levels.

SENIOR EXPO

State Sen. Lisa Baker, R-Lehman Township, and state Sen. John Yudichak, D-Plymouth Township, will co-host an expo for the area's senior citizens on Thursday, Sept. 15, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the 109th Field Artillery Armory, 280 Market St., Wilkes-Barre.
The expo will feature dozens of exhibitors to provide up-to-date information on programs and services available to Pennsylvania's older residents.
Vendors will include government agencies, health and nursing care facilities, consumer protection agencies, educational institutions, independent living services, safety awareness organizations and other groups that help and assist the region's senior citizens.
The expo is free and open to the public.
For more information, contact Baker's office at 675-3931 or Yudichak's office at 740-2434.

Baker, a member of the Greater PA Chapter Alzheimer's Association Advisory Board that recently hosted a public input session on the National Alzheimer's Plan, provided a copy of the letter she sent.

Shickshinny school going up for sale

Former Garrsion school vacated by Northwest Area prior to 2010-2011 school year.

WHAT'S NEXT

The school board next meets Sept. 21 at 7 p.m. in the high school library.

By TOM HUNTINGTON
Times Leader Correspondent

UNION TWP. – The Northwest Area School Board passed a resolution Wednesday to sell the vacated Garrison Building in Shickshinny, although it wasn't stated precisely how the sale will proceed.

During a brief discussion, Charles Brace, board president, said the board wanted to relieve the district of ownership of that building. Afterward, he said it would be a decision of the building and grounds committee whether to advertise the sale of the building or have it listed with a Realtor.

The building, which once served as the Shickshinny High School, was vacated as an educational facility prior to the 2010-2011 school year. The school board has had to pay for the building's insurance and maintenance since then.

At previous meetings there were discussions about the disposition of the structure in order to relieve the board of any liability and its prevailing expenses, but until now there hadn't been a stated public announcement to sell it.

Michael Pegarella, chairman of the policy committee, also outlined that the Hunlock Creek Elementary will be designated as Northwest Intermediate School, serving grades three to six, and Huntington Mills Elementary is now Northwest Area Primary School, serving kindergarten through second grade.

In other business, the board hired Vito Maladaki and Andrew Hanadel as social studies teachers and Crystal Richardson as a secondary language arts instructor. Jack Shultz was appointed as language arts chairman and Dan Delfine as social studies chairman.

In a report of the transportation committee, Peter Lanza, chairman, said that following a study, a duplication of services with regard to several school bus runs has been eliminated and efforts have been made by the school staff to alleviate traffic congestion at the schools.

He asked for the patience and cooperation of parents who are driving students to classes. He asked them to observe prevailing traffic patterns.

He noted there will be teachers who will serve as chaperones and greeters to assist students.

Lanza also said he recently learned that Northwest is required to have nine buses available under an emergency evacuation plan devised by PPL at Susquehanna Steam Electric Station, but PPL has provided no financial subsidy for these buses.

He said that presently, it is an expense that will have to be absorbed by the school district..

In his comments, Acting Superintendent Gary Powlus said that zoning variances have been sought for the erection of three towers within the area of the school district in order to facilitate cell phone service. In one instance, Powlus said, a proposed tower at Hunlock Creek had to be situated at least 260 feet from any structure.

He also reported that following a study, charter/cyber school expenses last year were $340,000. He announced that grants of $25,000 and $26,000 had been obtained for student services from the Berwick Health and Wellness Alliance.

When questioned, Brace said the board, following interview sessions, had narrowed the list of candidates for superintendent to three.

Northwest is seeking to find a successor to Nancy Tkatch, who resigned in June to accept a post at the West Side Career and Technical Center.

Powlus has been serving on an interim basis; Brace added that Powlus is not among the three candidates.

Pittston to retain law firm for sewer project

Mayor says $10 million project is delayed but is not over budget.

WHAT'S NEXT

Council will next meet at 7 p.m. Sept. 21.

By WILLIAM BELL
Times Leader Correspondent

PITTSTON – City council on Wednesday passed a resolution 4-1, with Councilman Danny Argo voting no, to retain the law firm of Glassberg & Doganeiro from Hazleton at $250 per hour for the ongoing sewer project.

City Manager Joseph Moskovitz, responding to a question from resident Wil Toole, said council felt the need to retain a specialized firm to deal with legal issues in the $10 million project. Mayor Jason Klush added that the project, while delayed, is not over budget, but there have been substantial change orders that might be subject to legal review.

Klush said the city had rejected bids to repair storm drains on multiple streets due to the cost. He said the bids would have cost the city over $250,000. The city will now approach the problem on a case-by-case basis, he added.

On the proposed home rule question, Klush and council clarified that the city is at the stage where it is considering only if a home rule study commission should be formed.

The voters will be asked in the next election if they want a home rule study commission. They will also have the opportunity to vote for prospective candidates to be on the commission if the vote is positive. They may vote for possible commission members even if they vote no for forming the commission.

If the formation of a commission is approved, those members elected will then study a home rule option for the city and produce a report and possible charter to present to the voters at the next election.

The voters would then vote on whether they want to approve home rule by accepting the commission's recommended changes and charter.

In other business, council approved an ordinance regulating material collection containers. The ordinance requires the landowners where any drop box is located to obtain a permit and provides for maintenance, setback and other controls over the containers.

In response to a question from Argo concerning safety, Moskovitz said the condition and appearance of the tires stored at Roy's Tires has already come to the city's attention.

Moskovitz cited dates when the code enforcement officer visited the site, and he said warning letters have been issued.

Klush added the matter would be pursued. The concerns included fire, West Nile, and appearance.

Klush presented a proclamation to Don Evans naming Aug. 17, 2011 as Don Evans Day in the city in recognition of his voluntary work making improvements at the Jefferson Park and the Fred Demich Hall at the park.

Woman jailed for stealing credit card

Renee A. Colon used another person's card to make more than $3,000 in purchases.

By SHEENA DELAZIO
sdelazio@timesleader.com

WILKES-BARRE – A Shickshinny woman was sentenced Thursday to three to six months in county prison on charges that she used another person's credit card to make more than $3,000 in purchases.

Renee A. Colon, 42, of South Main Street, who was originally charged with 28 counts relating to the purchases. She pleaded guilty Thursday to five charges, including forgery, before Luzerne County Judge Lewis Wetzel.

Wetzel said Colon, represented by attorney Samuel Falcone, must also pay $3,575 in restitution.

Assistant District Attorney Jim McMonagle prosecuted the case.

According to court records, in July 2008 Joseph Lovenduski told Plains Township police that someone stole his Visa credit card.

Lovenduski told police he had been letting a woman, Colon, stay at his home because she was "going through some hard times."

Lovenduski said he began to "tire of helping" Colon, and he asked her to remove her things from his residence.

An anonymous person left a note on Lovenduski's door that Colon went to his home to get her belongings and that the person overheard Colon say to a male that she took Lovenduski's credit card.

A copy of card transactions was obtained by police, who found that Colon had used the card at 14 different locations totaling $3,575.

Colon received 159 days credit for time already served in prison.

COURT BRIEF

WILKES-BARRE – A woman who police say sold crack cocaine to a police informant while pregnant was sentenced Thursday to six months in the county's Intermediate Punishment Program.

Laura Ashley Perrins, 21, of West Chestnut Street, was sentenced on charges of delivery of a controlled substance and corruption of minors by Luzerne County Judge Tina Polachek Gartley. Perrins pleaded guilty in June.

Polachek Gartley said Perrins must spend the first three months of her sentence on house arrest with an electronic monitor, with the remaining on probation, as well as an additional one year probation.

According to court papers, on Nov. 9, police say Perrins sold suspected crack cocaine to a police informant.

The police informant told investigators that Perrins was obviously pregnant at the time and that a young child was with her and present during the transaction.

He provided the following statement regarding his candidacy:

"I started my own business from the ground up. My businesses are 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. I am asking that you allow me to bring that work ethic and dedication with me as my contribution to making Wilkes-Barre a better place by electing me your city councilman. I will support our local crime watch groups and I will network with other cities and counties for creative ideas at my own expense.

"I will request a forensic audit of all city accounts, including all usage and logs for the self-serve gas pumps at the city garage and I will request a listing of all city vehicles that are used after hours. I will not vote for any tax increases or fees. I will support and vote for all resources to be made available for public safety and to enhance the police, fire and public works."

In the May 2007, primary election, Argenta ran as a Democrat and failed to win the nomination. Merritt was the winner in District E with 332 votes.

Police seek burglary accomplice

Thomas Owens Jr. teamed up with Jerome Sharr in Duryea burglary, police say.

By EDWARD LEWIS
elewis@timesleader.com

DURYEA – Police identified the second accomplice they say is responsible for a nighttime burglary at a market and cashing stolen winning lottery tickets.

Police allege Thomas Owens Jr., 21, last known address as Prospect Street, Wilkes-Barre, teamed up with Jerome Sharr, 20, to burglarize Rehoski's Market on Foote Avenue on Dec. 30.

Owens was one of three men charged on Tuesday with burglarizing several businesses in Hanover, Hunlock and Newport townships on June 26, and the vicious attack on Nanticoke Mayor Joseph Dougherty before stealing Dougherty's company vehicle on June 25, arrest records say.

Owens

Sharr is facing multiple burglary- and theft-related charges in Luzerne County Court for home breakins in the Wyoming Valley, including the heist at Rehoski's Market, court records say.

Sharr also is facing federal charges for a burglary at a Monroe County gun store and the theft of 12 guns in December.

According to the criminal complaints:

Police said surveillance video recorded two men driving a Dodge Neon and smashing a window at Rehoski's Market at about 4:35 a.m. on Dec. 30. The vehicle was stolen in Nanticoke several days earlier, police said.

A cash register and a rack of lottery tickets were stolen.

Police learned winning lottery tickets stolen from the market were cashed at three stores in Wilkes-Barre about three hours after the burglary, the complaints say.

Sharr admitted to the burglary but refused to identify the second suspect to police.

Police released a surveillance picture of the second suspect and soon received numerous phone calls identifying the man as Owens, according to the complaints.

He was arraigned by District Judge Fred Pierantoni III in Pittston on charges of burglary, criminal conspiracy, criminal mischief, theft and receiving stolen property. Bail on the charges was set at $35,000.

Owens remains jailed at the county prison for lack of $1 million bail that was set on Tuesday, when he was arraigned for the alleged assault on Dougherty and burglaries in Hanover, Hunlock and Newport townships.

Dad we are here 6 years later to honor you since you passed and words cannot express because for as easy going as you were, that's how wonderful you were. You were a kind man, loyal man, easy going spirit. Dad you were the KING of the ONE LINERS... like
Give it to me I will fix it
(Which of course meant a lot of duct tape)
You could have all the money in the world, but you can't take it with you. No matter who came in and out of your life, and there were quite a few characters (including family members) you never had a mean word to say about anyone. You accepted people for who they were. Dad you were one of the few people who truly knew the important things in life... family & friends. We remember you today as the best fun loving father, husband, grampy and the person who would say "if I didn't have my children, I would have nothing at all."

Costanzo 70-month prison term upheld

The sentence was given on conviction for taking Lackawanna County money.

By TERRIE MORGAN-BESECKER
tmorgan@timesleader.com

A federal appellate court has upheld the 70-month prison sentence imposed on Charles Costanzo, who was convicted in 2009 of stealing more than $600,000 from Lackawanna County's workers' compensation fund.

The Third Circuit Court of Appeals rejected Costanzo's argument that federal probation officials had incorrectly calculated the amount of loss that was attributable to him for his role in the scheme to defraud the county.

Costanzo was a partner with Mark Boriosi in Executive Claims Administration, which was hired in 2004 by former Lackawanna County commissioners Robert Cordaro and A.J. Munchak to administer the workers' compensation fund.

Cordaro and Munchak were convicted in June of taking bribes and extorting money from several businesses that did business with the county. Federal prosecutors had planned to call Costanzo, who allegedly used some of the money he stole to take Cordaro on a trip to the Playboy Mansion, as a witness at his trial. Costanzo refused to testify, however.

In Costanzo's case, authorities determined he and Boriosi conspired to misappropriate a total of $647,260 from the fund. Costanzo maintained he should be held responsible for just $93,189 because part of the money he took from the fund was legitimately owed to him for work he performed for the county.

The amount of the theft was important because it significantly affected the advisory sentencing guidelines, which called for a sentence of 70 to 87 months based on the $647,260 figure, compared to a guideline of 33 to 41 months if the court agreed the figure should be $93,189.

The Third Circuit court rejected Costanzo's claims. In a ruling issued Monday, the court noted Costanzo had the opportunity to file a request for payments, which would need to be substantiated by the county, but failed to do so.

The court also rejected Costanzo's argument that he was improperly found to have violated a position of trust – a determination that also increased his sentence.

The court noted Costanzo was in control of the bank account in which all workers' compensation funds were deposited, which gave him unfettered access to the money. The county relied on his integrity to administer the fund.

Father, son allegedly harassed Sarah Palin

FBI: Pair arrested for allegedly making threatening calls to ex-candidate, family.

By MICHAEL RUBINKAM
Associated Press

ALLENTOWN — A Pennsylvania man and his son were arrested Thursday on charges of harassing Sarah Palin's family and lawyers in a case a prosecutor said went beyond "merely creepy to truly threatening."

Craig Christy, 47, and his son, Shawn Christy, 19, were placed under arrest at the FBI office in Allentown. The pair were indicted by a federal grand jury in Alaska on Wednesday.

They are accused of harassing members of the former Alaska governor's family as well as her attorneys and employees of the law firm. Palin, the 2008 Republican vice presidential nominee, is also a possible presidential candidate.

U.S. Magistrate Judge Arnold Rapoport ruled Thursday that the Christys will be held in custody and sent to Alaska to face the charges.

The pair made hundreds of threatening calls, according to Assistant U.S. Attorney John Gallagher.

"There's a level of obsession here that elevates the conduct from merely creepy to truly threatening," Gallagher said in arguing for their detention.

Marc Fisher, Shawn Christy's attorney, argued his client did not pose a danger to the Palin family.

Shawn Christy

"There's no indication of any threat, no indication of any violence," he said.

Rapoport declined a request by Fisher and Michael Brunnabend, Craig Christy's lawyer, that the father and son remain free and report to Alaska themselves.

A magistrate in Alaska had previously issued restraining orders against both men.

Karen Christy, Craig Christy's wife and Shawn's mother, said in an interview Thursday that the family has been persecuted by the Palins and law enforcement officials for more than two years.

They contend Sarah Palin and her daughter, Willow, sent sexually oriented text messages to the teen in 2009.

"All of these things have been happening to my family, and the police and the FBI and the federal agents don't seem to (care) ... about going after Sarah Palin because she's a big political figure," Karen Christy said.

She denied the family is a threat to Sarah Palin, and said Craig and Shawn made the recent phone calls to try to locate an original copy of a letter threatening Willow Palin that was submitted as evidence against Shawn earlier this year.

Shawn Christy said he had no involvement in the letter.

W-B/Scranton airport gets $1.84 million grant

FAA money will be used for a hangar entrance road project already put out for bid.

By ANDREW M. SEDER
aseder@timesleader.com

PITTSTON TWP. – The Wilkes-Barre/Scranton International Airport has been awarded a $1.84 million grant from the Federal Aviation Administration for a hangar entrance road project.

Airport Director Barry Centini said the airport has already pledged $48,476 for the project from its general budget and an additional $360,077 from its Passenger Facility Charge fund.

The project was already put out for bid and Scartelli Construction Services of Taylor was the lowest responsible bidder at $1,984,379.

The company was told the project would not move forward until the FAA pledged the necessary money. Centini said that once the official approval forms are received from the FAA and the state's Department of Environmental Protection and Luzerne County Conservation District sign off on the work, Scartelli would have 100 days to complete it.

He said he hoped work would begin by mid-September and be complete by mid-December.

The work entails an extension of the airport's hangar road, on the side of the facility that is used by private aircraft and for rented hangars. Rehabilitation to that part of the property is included.

The latest work follows a line of multimillion-dollar projects being done at the airport. Work is underway on a $5.2 million apron-lengthening project that is expected to be completed by the end of the year. It's being performed by Popple Construction of Laflin.

Ninety-five percent of the cost is being paid by the Federal Aviation Administration while another 2.5 percent is coming from the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation. The airport is responsible for the remaining 2.5 percent, or $130,000.

A new air traffic control tower also is progressing. Work was temporarily held up last month when a congressional spat over a bill extending the Federal Aviation Administration's operating authority halted all projects.

The FAA put a hold on the $14.7 million contract for Narberth-based Daniel J. Keating Co. to build the new control tower. At the time, Joe Maloney, Keating's treasurer, said the tower was about 95 percent finished.

ter DeSanto.

Even though he's one of the movers behind the Victory league, DeSanto said the idea came from one of the former Challenger players, Eddie Orlosky.

DeSanto met him earlier this year at Terry's Diner in Moosic, where Orlosky works.

"I miss playing baseball," Orlosky told DeSanto.

"That's what sparked it," said DeSanto.

He and others are trying to raise between $5,000 and $6,000 for the league that will include other sports such as basketball, bowling, bocce ball, and hold dances for the adults. It's the first such league of its kind in the state. About half of the money would cover the costs of uniforms and equipment for the baseball league. Up to 30 players between the ages of 21 and 60 would be involved and split up between the red and blue teams.

Donna Burden of Wilkes-Barre, who is helping with the fundraising, said her son Timmy Kelly, 32, looked forward to the new league. Her son loves sports and watched her brothers play. "He just wanted to be out there," she said.

Kelly got his chance, but forgot his glove for the first game. He wouldn't forget it for the next game and would be swinging for the fences.

"I'll be trying to hit it over the fence next time," he said.

Patrols look for kids left in cars at casinos

The Associated Press

HARRISBURG — Parx Casino officials in suburban Philadelphia say they've stepped up parking lot patrols looking for kids left in cars by gambling parents.

The officials say only three incidents have been reported this year, compared to nine in 2010. But some board members suggested additional measures or tougher laws might be needed.

OUR OPINION: PITTSTON FESTIVAL

Sliced to sauced, the tomato rules

IN THE PANTHEON of palate pleasers, the tomato stands among demigods of the delectable. From the slice on your burger to the sauce on your pasta, from the cherry in your salad to the soup with your crackers, this versatile edible earned its ubiquitous place on our plates.

Tomatoes are the taste that made pizza famous, the juicy bites on your bruschetta and the cool mouthful in your gazpacho. They can stand or their own or blend perfectly with a horde of herbs (basil, rosemary, oregano, chives) or a barrel of cheeses (Parmesan, mozzarella, Gruyere).

Such special food deserves a special celebration, and Pittston has perfected the party.

And while only a fool would bypass the chance to chomp on fresh tomatoes at the peak of the season, the tomato lends itself to a bevy of preparation techniques: stewed, sun-dried, grilled, baked, marinated ...

This is the produce that required a U.S. Supreme Court ruling to be declared vegetable, not fruit – lofty distinction indeed.

Such a special food deserves a special celebration, and Pittston has perfected the party. Now is the time to stop being a couch tomato and head to the annual Tomato Festival, a four-day event continuing through Sunday in the city's downtown.

Vote for your favorite sauce (your monetary donation goes to the Greater Pittston YMCA), join the messy tomato fight. Enter your prized homegrown love apple (a French description) in competition for the largest, smallest, ugliest or most perfect tomato.

There's live music, a parade, a Tomato Queen Scholarship Pageant and contest for Little Miss and Little Mr. Tomato. Saturday's 5K run is dedicated to Spc. Dale Kridlo, killed in action in Afghanistan during 2010 – mourned at his Pittston funeral by a crowd so huge it spilled onto the sidewalks – and buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

And for the kids who hate their vegetables (forgetting what ketchup is made of), there are rides and games to help them forget that tomatoes are good for you.

Author Laurie Colwin contended that "A world without tomatoes is like a string quartet without violins." Well, we admit that might be a slight exaggeration. But a Pittston without a Tomato Festival?

Fortunately you don't have to find a metaphor. Just head to the celebration and enjoy.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

Todd Vonderheid
The Greater Wilkes-Barre Chamber of Commerce chief executive officer this week announced attempts to sell the downtown property housing Movies 14 in an effort to raise money to pay off chamber debt.

OTHER OPINION: FED THREAT

Perry's low blow harms candidacy

ONLY DAYS AFTER entering the presidential race, Texas Gov. Rick Perry has lowered the tone of the discussion.

On Monday he said it would be "treasonous" for the Federal Reserve Bank to issue more money "to play politics." He also said that if Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke "prints more money between now and the election" and came to Texas, he would be treated "pretty ugly."

The Federal Reserve issues U.S. currency and is charged by law with overseeing the nation's monetary policy. Under the Federal Reserve Act, the Fed is required "to promote effectively the goals of maximum employment, stable prices and moderate long-term interest rates." The Fed's board of governors and the Federal Open Market Committee do this, in part, by setting interest rates and adjusting the money supply. Perry should want the Fed to do its job, regardless of political season, to help the U.S. economy. But a terrible economy, with rising joblessness and uncertainty, would enhance the electoral prospects of the Texan and his Republican opponents. It is he who is acting politically – and shame on him for impugning the motives of the Fed.

Even worse was his suggestion that if "this guy" – Bernanke – issued more currency it would be "treasonous" and likely to bring treatment in Texas that's "pretty ugly."

Perry's suggestion of physical thuggery drags the presidential race to a new low. The governor will no doubt clean up his act, but his caustic remarks offer insight to his possible temperament as president.

Science should be bedrock of Marcellus Shale debate

MARK GUYDISH
COMMENTARY

Wilkes professor Kenneth Klemow put the message ... into succinct terms. "My plea to you is that we try to improve and increase the amount of science, the amount of objective information that we have going into Marcellus Shale policy," he said.

FOR A fuel that burns clean enough to use in your kitchen, natural gas has produced smoke you can choke on in public debate.

So when state Rep. Eddie Day Pashinski brought Marcellus Shale legislative hearings to Wilkes University in Wilkes-Barre this week, the risk of fog ran high. To my pleasant surprise, it was four hours of thoughtful and enlightening testimony, highlighted by compelling comments from the one faction too often excluded in the whole "fracking" debate: unbiased science.

Not to discount the comments preceding two college professors and an environmental consultant. Gas Drilling Awareness Coalition President Tom Jiunta made the blunt point that the state only has one inspector for every 742 wells (Marcellus and conventional gas/oil). He also made the nuanced connection between chronic exposure to small but dangerous quantities of chemicals or gases and health insurance prices.

"This silent and cumulative cost to the public health has been adding to the skyrocketing cost of medical care," Jiunta said.

Coalition Treasurer Nancy Dolan disputed claims the industry is a homegrown success story, noting companies in China, Japan and Norway are involved with drilling. She also entered into the record a coalition video, "Marcellus Shale Reality Tour." You can watch online at www.gdacoalition.org. Yes, it's one-sided, but well worth a look.

PennFuture staff attorney Mark Szybist rattled off a string of issues and proposed solutions that sound so sensible you wonder why we're not already doing them. Two examples: Make sure the Department of Environmental Protection has the resources to oversee drilling, and ensure fracking waste water is properly disposed.

As to the claim that natural gas can be a transition fuel that gets us from oil dependency to more sustainable resources, Szybist posed the forgotten paradox: We need money – a severance tax on gas extraction being an obvious choice – to fund research that creates those new technologies.

"If natural gas is to be a bridge," he said, "we've got to build that destination."

These arguments were counterbalanced effectively by Terry Bossert from Chief Oil and Gas and Michael Love from UGI. Bossert repeated his company's stance: A reasonable severance tax is fine. Love conceded Marcellus gas is flowing out of state because of a shortage of pipelines, but predicted it will be used locally soon. "In the next year or two we hope to have Wilkes-Bare entirely on Marcellus natural gas," he said.

But as I said, it was the trio of science "wonks" who were both the most informative and entertaining.

Wilkes University professor Brian Redmond provided an overview of the complex interactions of methane and other elements that can release hazardous elements into our air and water. He suggested the presence of helium in methane could indicate it came from Marcellus Shale and not from shallower sources. He proposed the fascinating notion of pulling water for fracking use from the sand and gravel between the surface and our abandoned coal mines; it would prevent that relatively clean water from filtering into those mines and becoming contaminated with acid before flowing into streams.

Environmental consultant Brian Oram made the logical argument that there should be frequent, even constant, water monitoring near wells. But Wilkes professor Kenneth Klemow put the message from all three into succinct terms.

"My plea to you is that we try to improve and increase the amount of science, the amount of objective information that we have going into Marcellus Shale policy," he said. "Preventing problems is cheaper than remedying them."

Funny how science and common sense can fit so well together.

Despite neglect in past, Sterling should be saved

Several years ago, the Hotel Sterling in downtown Wilkes-Barre should have been put into the hands of a local real estate agent, of which we have many, instead of CityVest. Six million dollars would not have been wasted.

I believe the money to seal the building was instead spent to demolish adjacent buildings to expand this prime site for selfish, greedy reasons. Why hasn't there been an audit regarding how that money was spent?

The Hotel Sterling was constructed at a time when contractors took pride in putting the best materials in their work so the structure could stand the tests of time. Basically, the building is solid and has withstood floods, the vibration of heavy traffic and mine subsidence. But it could not withstand man's neglect?

In four months, the Luzerne County commissioners will be out of office, and hopefully the voters will install people of integrity to serve in the home rule form of government. Why not let the new council and the taxpayers decide the fate of the hotel?

The county already has suffered with the waste of indecision regarding the sale of the former Valley Crest Nursing Home, left vacant and neglected.

Save the Sterling. It is a focal point upon entering the city.

Writer backs releasing info on manager hopefuls

In reply to a letter to the editor in Wednesday's edition ("Getting best applicants should be goal of council"), let me say that I favor making public the names of all candidates for Luzerne County manager.

Candidates should notify government officials to whom they are currently responsible and inform them of their plans. This is fair and ethical. It prevents any government or corporation from being blindsided and gives it time either to start a search of its own or to give the manager a new incentive to stay on.

Fear of job loss or retaliation should not be a reason for keeping a candidate's name private, and all candidates for Luzerne County manager should be up front with everybody.

TOMATOES

festival as one of the 50 best food festivals in the U.S.

Many of the edibles offered are tomato-based or Italian. But other vendors were selling gyros, London broil, and eggplant and sweet potato fries.

Two Italian bakeries served up cakes, pastry and gelato. Strawberry and blueberry shortcake as well as rice pudding, cookies and pie added to the long list of desserts from which to choose.

Nocito said the festival raised money for various charities.

"The tomato fights on Saturday raise money for food-related charities including Meals on Wheels, soup kitchens and the Great Pittston Food Pantry," she said.

She also said the festival collaborated fully with the Pittston YMCA's Sauce Wars fundraiser.

The Sauce Wars contest pits five local Pittston restaurant sauces against each other. For a dollar, a festival attendee may sample the five sauces and vote for his or her favorite.

Michelle Cassetori, a Pittston YMCA board member, said last year's sauce contest raised about $1,500.

"Some people take it very seriously," she said.

This year's Sauce Wars contestants include Napoli's Pizza and Restaurant, Parente's Riverview Pizzeria, the River Street Ale House, Junior's Pasta House and Palazzo 53, all of Pittston.

"The first year, they didn't invite farmers, but people asked for them. I've been here ever since."

Harold Golomb
of Plains Township

The YMCA will announce the winners on Sunday night and tell which sauce came from which restaurant.

"Everyone wants to know the winner. The people in Pittston are very serious about their sauce. We send out a press release so that those who can't attend on Sunday can still find out who won," Cassetori said.

For those who want to do it themselves, the festival features fresh produce stands. Harold Golomb of Plains Township had a beautiful array of red, green and orange tomatoes for sale as well as other produce.

Golomb said that this was his 27th year at the festival.

"The first year, they didn't invite farmers, but people asked for them. I've been here ever since," he said.

Lisa Grant of Wilkes-Barre waited for her turn in front of Carmella's Italian Deli and Pastry. "I came for the cannoli," she said.

Matt Powell, 20, of Avoca, identified what he was waiting for in front of the Two Gentleman's Catering booth: "The porketta sandwich."

He said he had come to the festival for the last four years.

But not all come to the festival for food. Rides, skill games and a climbing wall and music in the bandshell attracted attention.

Pastor Robert Sauers, 84, of St. John's Lutheran Church of Wilkes-Barre, was attending the festival for the 28th year.

"I had a congregation in Hughestown not far from here for 36 ½ years. I come to see all the people," he said.

Emily Halchak of Eynon attended with her husband, Whipper, and their two small children. "We come every year for our oldest daughter to go on the rides and to catch up with people we know," she said.

Bungee jumping was a popular attraction at the festival. Jessica Smith, 12, of Pittston said of her turn on the trampoline, "It was really fun, but it was a little bit scary."

But even she admitted that the best part of the festival was the food.

The festival continues through Sunday night.

that "the College's Blackboard Learn course management system malfunctioned due to software corruption" on June 30. The system was repaired by Aug. 7, but three days worth of backed-up files could not be restored.

"Unfortunately, some students did lose some work which was previously completed due to corrupted back-up files," Nelson wrote in an email. "Students were given an extra week to complete any lost work. The malfunction affected 595 students," Nelson said.

Told of students saying they did not find out about the problem because they had left for vacation, Nelson noted that dean of business and technologies Gary Mrozinski sent several communications to students.

She said he emailed each individual section of classes for which students were using the Blackboard Learn system and also e-mailed students when the system was back online offering to assist them in any way.

One student said she knew a classmate who had received an "incomplete" on a course because he didn't learn about the glitch in time. Nelson said she had no way of confirming that without the student's name, but added that LCCC would work to rectify such a problem if it occurred.

Asked what steps were taken to avoid a recurrence, Nelson said that "due to the software corruption and corrupted back-up files, the College had to obtain updated hardware and updated back-up software."

In her email, Nelson quoted Mrozinski: "The most important issue is that our students are served. We sincerely apologize to the students who were affected."

killed in Gaza had been involved in planning the attack.

Gunfire continued on both sides of the border late into the evening. After nightfall, Israel's "Iron Dome" anti-missile system intercepted a rocket fired by Gaza militants at the city of Ashkelon, the military said.

The attacks were the deadliest against Israelis since a gunman killed eight civilians in Jerusalem in 2008. They suggested that Egypt's recent political upheaval and a resulting power vacuum in Sinai had allowed militants to open a new front against Israel on the long-quiet frontier.

The attack began shortly after noon in southern Israel with gunfire at a civilian bus heading toward the Red Sea resort city of Eilat, currently at the height of the tourist season.

A number of passengers were hit, the military said. The gunmen had crossed the border and set up an ambush along a 300-yard strip, armed with automatic weapons, grenades and suicide bomb belts, according to the military.

"We heard a shot and saw a window explode. I didn't really understand what was happening at first," passenger Idan Kaner told Israel's Channel 2 TV. "After another shot, there was chaos in the bus and everyone jumped on everyone else."

Within an hour, gunmen had riddled another passing bus and two cars with bullets and rigged a roadside bomb that detonated under an army jeep rushing to the scene. At the same time, mortar gunners in Gaza opened fire at soldiers along the Gaza-Israel border fence.

TV video showed the first bus with its windows shattered. Its seats were stained with blood and luggage littered the aisle.

The Israeli dead included six civilians and one soldier, according to the Israeli military's southern commander, Maj. Gen. Tal Russo.

Israeli soldiers eventually killed five attackers, the military said, and defense officials said three of the bodies were wired with explosives. It was not clear how many militants were involved or where they were from.

Egyptian security and Interior Ministry officials said a gunfight erupted on the border, and three Egyptians were killed, one police officer and two soldiers. The officials, speaking on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to brief reporters, said the gunfire erupted while Israelis were chasing militants who were trying to re-enter Sinai. It was not clear if the gunfire at the Egyptians came from Israeli soldiers or the militants. The Israeli military had no comment.

According to the Israeli military, during the fighting along the border the gunmen tried and failed to shoot down an Israeli helicopter with an anti-tank missile.

Roadblocks were erected in the area, sealing roads in and out of Eilat, and senior Israeli security officials convened an emergency session at the Defense Ministry in Tel Aviv.

Hours later, militants who had apparently gone undetected attacked again, and a member of an elite police counter-terrorism unit was killed, the eighth Israeli fatality, according to Chief Inspector Alex Kagalsky, a spokesman for the Israel police.

Israel said the attackers had come from Gaza and made their way into neighboring Sinai and from there into Israel.

"Today we all witnessed an attempt to step up terror by attacking from Sinai. If anyone thinks Israel will live with that, he is mistaken," Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said late Thursday. "If the terror organizations think they can strike at our civilians without a response, they will find that Israel will exact a price — a very heavy price."

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton condemned what she called "premeditated acts of terrorism against innocent civilians," and said the U.S. and Israel were "united in the fight against terror."

Taher Nunu, a spokesman for the Hamas government, denied the militants' complicity, saying Gaza "has nothing to do with these attacks."

YOUTH

The bishop said he knew several of St. Faustina's youths, whom he met at a diocesan-wide "Light the Fire" rally in 2009, and he was inspired by their excitement and enthusiasm.

The youths departed New York for Madrid on Aug. 11 and spent their first few days in Europe in Italy, touring Rome and Assisi, before returning to Madrid.

"The city of Rome was absolutely breathtaking, and being in Madrid with over a million other young faithful who are so proud of their faith is truly awesome," 24-year-old Jonathan Pipan, one of the parish youth directors, wrote in an email on Thursday.

"The most surprising aspect so far is how those of vastly different cultures get along so well, even with language barriers," Pipan wrote.

Shannon Kowalski, 21, of Glen Lyon, Newport Township, wrote it was an emotional experience seeing Vatican City, St. Peter's Basilica and Rome.

She found Madrid and World Youth Day "indescribable. Thousands of people of varying ages fill the city with an amazing energy. Everywhere you turn there are people chanting or singing." What surprised her most was the hospitality of the Spanish people.

"Hundreds of thousands, if not a million, energized and noisy Catholic Christian people have taken over their city, and they have been very gracious and hospitable," Kowalski said.

Youth director Kevin Halchak wrote he has been "amazed by the emotion, spirit, and enthusiasm shown by each of our pilgrims. Their love of Christ and dedication to the faith is truly inspiring."

The youths' parents believe their children are benefiting from the experience in many ways.

"I think it's so great that they're over there. It's like the historical foundation of our church, and they're experiencing it firsthand. I think that this will deepen their faith," said Janice Leiby, whose son Alexander, 18, is on the trip.

Joann Mavus believes walking through ancient Roman buildings and seeing ruins and relics is "an awesome faith experience" for her sons, John, 19, and Michael, 15, as well as experiencing World Youth Day with "hundreds of thousands of kids their own age."

Paula Labenski, whose daughter Nicole, 19, is among St. Faustina's pilgrims, said that even though the youth group was tight-knit to begin with, the experience in Madrid will help them form an even closer bond. And while the youths have been active in their church, "I really think this will bring everything a little closer – their relationship with God and their faith," she said.

The parents and members of the parish have been following the youths' activities and experiences through social media – a group leader posts updates and photos on a Facebook page created for the trip – and on EWTN, the Catholic television network.

Labenski said the youths owe a debt of gratitude to the St. Faustina parish community for helping to make the trip possible.

"Without their support, this would have never happened. They have supported the kids with every spaghetti dinner, breakfast, candy bar sale, just everything," she said.

Pat Botsko, the parish media coordinator who publicized the fundraisers, said parishioner Tammy Springer deserves much credit for spearheading each one.

The Rev. Jim Nash, pastor at St. Faustina, said parish music director Bill Borysewicz put together the trip when he served as youth minister. "I don't even know how to put into words what Bill has done for the kids. ... He just capitalized on their interests and brings the best out in them, makes them want to be involved."

And the incredible youth participation not only in World Youth Day, but also in parish life in general, wouldn't be happening if it weren't for Nash, said Mavus.

The parents agreed youth participation skyrocketed since Nash became pastor there six years ago.

"I really credit him because my boys feel welcome as part of the church. And he has it really balanced. It's not all kneel and pray, it's let's have fun in being a community, it's everything, it's giving back, it's the nursing home visits, it's the food bank, it's cutting somebody's grass," Mavus said, also recalling youth group trips to rallies and amusement parks.

Nash redirected credit to the parish community for supporting the youths and to the youths themselves, recalling their many good works in the community.

CROPS

Throughout the day Thursday, loyal customers and fellow farmers offered words of encouragement to Broyan and purchased his surviving bounty.

"They told us that they're sorry, but there's not much they can do. My customers were all coming and patronizing me. It meant a lot," Broyan said.

Thursday was a bright spot in what's been a tough week.

"There's nothing too positive to look forward to," he said, noting that this season was hindered by heavy spring rains, but the crops were about two or three weeks away from really coming in full force.

He said a walk through his fields left him dismayed but determined to keep the family farm, which is now run by his son Francis and his wife Jennifer, operational and to prepare for next year.

Over the years his farm has had rough seasons, from drought to flooding, and hail storms. But this was different.

Looking at damaged vegetables on even more damaged vines, he said he knew it was catastrophic right away.

"They're gone and they're not coming back," he said while bagging some green peppers for a customer.

Other farmers on Public Square on Thursday had empathy for Broyan's predicament.

"We live in fear of this every year," said Paul Brace, whose family owns Brace Orchards in Franklin Township. "Farming is such a gamble."

Brace went out of his way Monday morning to find Broyan at the market in Scranton and offer his sympathies and express his remorse.

He said he was at a loss for meaningful words.

"You just can't even express how sorry you are," said Brace, who watched his own father undergo something similar to what Broyan experienced back in 1956.

"It hailed for three hours straight," Brace recalled. The entire orchard's yield was destroyed.

"My dad just sat up there and cried in the shower," he said.

Some customers purchased twice the amount they normally would from Broyan at Thursday's market.

Melanie Pierce, of Laflin, said she has her favorite tables she frequents each week at the market, and Broyan's is one of them. She said she read the story in Sunday's Times Leader about the damage and immediately her heart sunk into her stomach.

She said she wasn't sure if they would be at the market, but once she saw Albert and his grandchildren she felt a bit better.

"This is their life. This is their everything. I knew I had to be here today to support them," she said.

Brace said customers know farming is a hard career, but farmers themselves understand what this type of loss truly means in a way a customer might not.

"When a guy has planted and put in such hard work and in less than one hour it's all wiped out, you just feel for him," Brace said. And it's not something Broyan will get over in a few days or weeks.

"He's still going out in those fields every day and seeing the damage and the loss, and that hurt doesn't go away," Brace said.

Latest storm batters the Hurricanes

By TIM REYNOLDS
AP Sports Writer

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Speaking out for the first time since Miami football players were accused of getting cash, gifts and prostitutes from an ex-booster, athletic director Shawn Eichorst vowed Thursday that "a better day" would be coming for the Hurricanes. Some players also ended their silence to say the team is hurting because of the allegations.

Those messages came as the attorney for Nevin Shapiro, a convicted Ponzi scheme architect, defended her client's accusations that he bankrolled a wild lifestyle for Hurricane players.

In a statement, Eichorst said the subjects of the NCAA and university investigation have his unconditional support. He urged a skeptical fan base to remain patient with a process that went on quietly for five months, then burst into the public eye Tuesday when Shapiro's claims were published by Yahoo Sports.

"There are tough times ahead, challenges to overcome and serious decisions to be made, but we will be left standing and we will be stronger as a result," Eichorst wrote. "I understand there are unanswered questions, concerns and frustration by many but this Athletic Department will be defined now and in the future, by our core values, our integrity and our commitment to excellence, and by nothing else."

Even Shapiro's attorney, Maria Elena Perez — a University of Miami graduate who proudly displays her diploma in her office — said she agrees with Eichorst that the Hurricanes will be "left standing" when this process ends.

"I think there will be a football program after this," Perez said. "If they shut down this football program, too many people will lose too much money."

But Perez said the allegations were not made up and speculated more could be triggered by Shapiro's story. The attorney said Shapiro, who is serving a 20-year prison sentence for masterminding a $930 million Ponzi scheme, is aware of the fallout from his claims made to Yahoo Sports.

"I believe inevitably there will be more," Perez said. "Whether that comes from Nevin or from outside sources who have additional information about this, I can't tell you. But I believe that there will

Teams to get first tests on Saturday

Lehman at Valley View highlights 17 scrimmages featuring WVC teams.

Finally a chance to block and tackle someone other than a teammate.

All 17 Wyoming Valley Conference football teams will conclude their first week of double sessions with scrimmages Saturday.

Most scrimmages are in the morning, but there's a good one up north at 7 p.m. tomorrow. Lake-Lehman, a surprise District 2 Class 2A playoff team last season, travels to Valley View, a team considered a frontrunner for the D2-3A title that features Penn State recruit linebacker Nyeem Wartman.

"Everyone is saying states for them, so it's going to be a very good test at Valley View on Saturday night," Lehman coach Jerry Gilsky said. "In a scrimmage, you don't want to go against average teams, you want to go against better teams to get us to perform at a higher standard.

"They're a bunch of bears. A lot of two- and three-year starters from what I hear. Last year was a tough scrimmage."

Scrimmages last roughly two hours, with each team taking turns running a predetermined number of offensive plays. Coaches are on the field and there is a skeleton crew of PIAA game officials to monitor the play. No score is kept, but the unofficial winner is the SOUTH WILLIAMSPORT — The boys from Billings keep making Montana Little League history.

The first team from the state to advance to South Williamsport overcame a shaky start and three solo homers Thursday by the sluggers from Rapid City, S.D., to win its Little League World Series debut, 6-4.

Connor Kieckbusch and his teammates were understandably a little anxious when they first trotted on to the manicured field at Lamade Stadium, with about 11,000 fans watching their every move.

Those nerves disappeared after a five-run fourth inning highlighted by Kieckbusch's two-run single and Cole McKenzie's two-RBI

Canzler's blast leads Bulls past SWB

For The Times Leader

MOOSIC – Run production has been a problem for the Scranton/Wilkes-Barre Yankees as of late. Last night was no different as they fell to the Durham Bulls 5-1.

Durham jumped out to the early 2-0 lead in the top of the second. With two outs in the inning and Hazleton native Russ Canzler on first after singling to center, Daniel Mayora doubled to the wall in right-center giving the Bulls runner on second an third.

Durham catcher Nevin Ashley then brought home both Canzler and Mayora with a two-run single to right.

That was just the beginning of a big night for Canzler, who was 3-for-4 with two RBI and blasted his 18th home run of the season in the seventh, a two-run shot that sailed over the wall in right for an opposite field blast.

"The first couple games, I'd be lying if I said I wasn't nervous," Canzler said about his return to his hometown area. "It's been very overwhelming and heartwarming to say the least. It's definitely one of those nights I'll remember for the rest of my career."

The Bulls added another run in the top of the third. Tim Beckham hit a solo home run to left field. It was Beckham's second home run since joining the Durham Bulls. He was the number one overall pick in the 2008 MLB Draft.

Canzler, who hit three home runs against Lehigh Valley this season – another team close to his hometown – then added to the lead with a two-run shot to put Durham ahead 5-0 entering the bottom of the seventh.

"When I was a kid, I used to come here and see the Red Barons play," Canzler said. "I played a few games here when the turf was still on the field. But, once I got into pro ball that was one thing that I always wanted. Once I got with the Rays, I marked that on my schedule and I know a lot of people back home did too.

"(The home run) was awesome. I was fortunate enough when we played down in Lehigh (Valley) to have some people there and I hit a grand slam in my first at bat. This is right up there with that moment."

The Yankees finally got on the board in the bottom of the ninth. With runners on the corners and one out, Jorge Vazquez hit an RBI-single to left scoring Dickerson.

The Yankees dropped their season-high eighth straight game and now sit at 62-62 on the season. Scranton/Wilkes-Barre has not won a game since game one of the double header

OPINION

JIM LITKE

Stuck in an argument he can't win

ASKED WHERE he ranked among NBA greats, Moses Malone didn't have to think long.

"I'll always be No. 1," he replied with flawless logic, "to myself."

Keep that in mind as the seven-seasons-long-and-still-running-strong debate about Giants quarterback Eli Manning unfolds during the upcoming NFL season. This week, Manning put himself in the same class as Tom Brady in response to a question about elite quarterbacks in the NFL, then hedged a little bit and said he was "Top 5, Top 10." Never mind that a Super Bowl title and a wealth of stats have earned him a spot in that conversation. It's an argument Manning can't win.

Instead of being encouraged that he finally spoke up for himself — another thing he's been knocked for since arriving in New York — some fans are practically demanding an apology.

"I'm not trying to be a better quarterback than that guy," Manning said about Brady, as though his remarks needed clarification. "I'm trying to win games for the Giants."

It's revealing in one sense that the debate caught him by surprise. After all, blowing things out of proportion is practically a civic duty in New York. But Manning claimed he didn't know his remarks had caused a stir until his father, Archie, a fair NFL quarterback in his own days, called him.

"I thought after the interview, it was a nice little interview and nothing would come out of it," Eli recalled.

Fat chance. Playing quarterback in the NFL, maybe more than any position in sports, has become a game of show and tell. It's no longer enough to get your hands on the hardware, mumble a few thanks to teammates and the organization and melt into the background, the way Roger Staubach and most of the best QBs of his generation did. Now the best ones have to win and talk about it with just the right amount of swagger. Marrying a supermodel, for example, speaks volumes. So do starring roles in a raft of commercials. Deflecting praise at nearly every turn, or going about business in a quiet, professional manner wasn't going to be enough for some Giants fans. Not surprising, those are the same people who want to smack Manning for being too cocky. All that really matters, of course, is whether Manning believes what he said.

Imagine growing up as the baby brother of one of the best quarterbacks ever, and you begin to understand where he's coming from. Eli couldn't run his mouth at the dinner table in his own house, not with Peyton alongside. Archie, who's been in demand the last few years after both sons took turns in the Super Bowl spotlight, has always made a point to downplay any sibling rivalry in those interviews. But a story he told on the eve of the Giants' 2008 NFC Championship win over the Packers in Green Bay — en route to an even more improbable win in that year's NFL title game — hinted at what Eli was always up against.

In 2005, after Hurricane Katrina passed by the family's New Orleans home without causing much damage, burglars broke in. Peyton and Eli had signed a dozen jerseys each for

MAJOR LEAGUE ROUNDUP

Minor, Jones lead Braves past Giants

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Mike Minor knew he couldn't afford any big mistakes going against two-time Cy Young Award winner Tim Lincecum.

Instead, it was Lincecum who cracked.

Minor pitched six crisp innings and Chipper Jones homered off Lincecum for the only run, leading the Atlanta Braves to a 1-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants on Thursday night.

"He's obviously the better pitcher," Minor said. "It's a big win."

The left-hander pitched brilliantly, allowing just four hits and one intentional walk while striking out a season-high nine. Only two runners got as far as second base against Minor (3-2), who didn't flinch when Cody Ross led off the game with a double.

"Instead of giving in, I tried to bear down," Minor said. "I knew if he scored, that would be a big run."

Lincecum (11-10) was no slouch, surrendering five hits in seven innings with seven Ks. But the wiry right-hander made one pitch he wanted back, serving up a high fastball to Jones leading off the fifth. He sent a drive soaring into the right-field seats for 11th homer, giving the Braves all the offense they would need.

"You know you're not going to hit too many homers off Lincecum," Jones said. "He made one mistake, and that's all we needed."

Lincecum was trying to go inside with the pitch, but it faded back over the plate.

"Chipper's a great hitter," the Giants starter said. "I gave up that one timely home run. That cost me."

Phillies 4, Diamondbacks 1

PHILADELPHIA — John Mayberry Jr. hit a two-run homer, David Herndon tossed three scoreless innings in relief and the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Arizona Diamondbacks in a matchup of division leaders.

The major league-leading Phillies took two of three in a potential playoff preview, improving to 14-1-1 in their last 16 series.

A thunderstorm delayed the game for 2 hours, 17 minutes after three innings. Neither starting pitcher returned when play resumed.

Herndon (1-2) gave up one hit and struck out four to earn his second career win. Ryan Madson finished for his 23rd save in 24 tries.

Ian Kennedy (15-4) gave up three runs and five hits in three innings, failing to become the NL's first 16-game winner. He had won his previous seven starts.

Dodgers 5, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — Clayton Kershaw throttled the streaking Brewers with eight scoreless innings and Rod Barajas homered, leading the Los Angeles Dodgers to a win over Milwaukee.

The NL Central-leading Brewers came in winners of 19 of 21 and were looking to complete a 7-0 homestand.

But Kershaw (15-5) was tremendous, retiring 13 of his final 14 batters and never facing serious trouble after the third inning.

Nationals 3, Reds 1

WASHINGTON— Jonny Gomes had a two-run single, Jesus Flores hit his first home run in more than two years and Jordan Zimmermann pitched shutout ball into the sixth inning as the Washington Nationals beat the Cincinnati Reds.

Zimmermann and four relievers combined to limit the Reds to an unearned run. Zimmermann allowed six hits, walking one and striking out two. He left with runners on first and second and two outs in the sixth. Ryan Mattheus came on to strike out Paul Janish to end the inning. Mattheus did not face another batter because of a tight right shoulder.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Indians 4, White Sox 2

CHICAGO — Justin Masterson pitched six effective innings, Kosuke Fukudome had a tiebreaking RBI triple and the Cleveland Indians inched closer to the top of the AL Central with a victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Matt LaPorta hit a two-run homer for Cleveland, which pulled within 1 1-2 games of idle Detroit for the division lead. The Tribe opens a three-game series at Detroit on Friday.

Red Sox 4, Royals 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Dustin Pedroia drove in three runs with a pair of well-timed singles, Josh Beckett survived a shaky start to go seven innings and the Boston Red Sox got back on the winning track with a 4-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals on Thursday night.

Jason Varitek drove in the other run for the Red Sox, who had lost five of their last seven games after getting shut out by the division-rival Tampa Bay Rays on Wednesday.

Yankees 8, Twins 4

MINNEAPOLIS — CC Sabathia stopped his two-start losing streak with nine strikeouts over seven innings, and the New York Yankees hit three home runs to support him in a victory over the depleted Minnesota Twins.

The Yankees lead the majors with 163 homers this season, despite only 13 from Alex Rodriguez, who has been out following knee surgery last month. Mark Teixeira hit his 33rd, a two-run shot in the third, and Nick Swisher and Andruw Jones hit back-to-back deep balls in the fifth inning against Brian Duensing (8-12).

Jones sent his into the third deck above left field, an estimated 434 feet.

Torre: Umpires wrong on call in KC

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. – The home run should have been a double.

Joe Torre, Major League Baseball's executive vice president for baseball operations, said Dana DeMuth's crew, working the New Yankees at Kanas City Royals game Wednesday night made a mistake on a call on a home run by Billy Butler.

"There really was a misunderstanding, and I'm not trying to pick my words here, as to what the ground rule represented," Torre said Thursday after two days of owners' meetings concluded at the Otesaga Hotel. "Obviously, from what went on he was very sure that that ball was a home run 'cause it hit that back fence, which is out of the park."

Butler's ball appeared to strike the upper railing of a second wall behind the left field wall before bouncing back onto the field. Umpires ruled it a home run but went in to look at a review after talking to New York manager Joe Girardi.

Girardi argued again briefly when they returned and confirmed the designated hitter's 15th home run. Replays showed the ball hitting the padding below the railing and bouncing up toward the front row of fans before coming back onto the field.

DeMuth ruled the hit a home run even after the video review. It should have been a double.

Long after the game ended, major league umpire supervisor Steve Palermo led the entire crew out to the wall and could be seen pointing at the spot the ball hit.

The ballpark's rule is that the ball must go into the stands for it to be a homer.

Palermo told The Associated Press on Thursday that "it was a misunderstanding of the ground rules. What they thought was, wasn't."

be more."

The Hurricanes went through two practices Thursday, and coach Al Golden said he's hoping their focus is on football and nothing else. The team will hold its second scrimmage of training camp early next week, after which the depth chart and 60-person travel roster for the Sept. 5 season-opener at Maryland will essentially be set.

The NCAA investigation, though no one knows when it will end, is likely going to stretch for several more weeks, at least.

"If anything, it's going to bring us closer together," Golden said. "Again, 90 percent of the guys have nothing to do with this as it happened in the past. For the most part, inside here, we're moving forward."

Though Golden said his team decided on its own to limit usage of social media like Facebook and Twitter during training camp, some Miami players felt Thursday was the right time to speak out. Defensive back Brandon McGee tweeted before the morning practice, "Know this for sure everyone hurts! We all feel pain!" Between sessions, running back Mike James wrote "You have to appreciate the process and accept the struggle."

In Lubbock, Texas, former Miami athletic director Kirby Hocutt, who now holds the same job at Texas Tech, called the situation involving the Hurricanes "sad" and "unfortunate."

Hocutt said he has not been approached by NCAA investigators.

"If young people made mistakes, that's unfortunate," Hocutt said. He added that in his time at Miami, the school was very aggressive when it came to educating players about the pitfalls that could come from interacting with third parties.

"It was a rogue booster and someone who was determined to go around the system," Hocutt said.

The Hurricanes are trying to get back to business-as-usual, but it's a difficult task given the uncertainty around this season, the eligibility of a dozen players named in the Yahoo Sports report, and the potential repercussions the team may face once the NCAA investigation is completed.

Two of the current players implicated in the Shapiro scandal — quarterback Jacory Harris and defensive back JoJo Nicholas — were not in uniform Thursday morning, for reasons that school officials said didn't involve the investigation. Harris was on the field in shorts and a T-shirt, whistle dangling from his neck, serving as a player coach for the morning. Golden has used several players in that role in recent days.

Nicholas was tending to a family matter and was excused. Harris was in uniform for the afternoon practice, which was closed to reporters.

"These are not times for pity and reflection," Eichorst said. "All of my efforts and energy are committed to ensuring the integrity of the NCAA investigation, demanding the full cooperation of our employees and student-athletes and providing unwavering support to our more than 400 plus student-athletes and more than 150 coaches and staff."

Shapiro is in the process of being transferred from federal custody in Atlanta and could end up in prison in South Florida, though his attorney said she's still unaware where exactly he's going and when he'll get there. As part of his sentence, Shapiro has been ordered to pay nearly $83 million in restitution, and he plans to write a book to help raise those funds.

"We thought once this got out, inevitably, there would be someone interested in writing the book," Perez said. "That's how he hopes to make the victims whole."

Miami joined a growing list of schools with major football programs to be investigated by the NCAA for rule-breaking in the last 18 months. Others include Southern California, Ohio State, Auburn, Oregon, Michigan, North Carolina, Georgia Tech and LSU.

Shapiro began making his allegations about a year ago. He told Yahoo Sports that 72 football players and other athletes at Miami received improper benefits from him in the past decade.

More than a dozen former Miami players interviewed by the AP this week have either denied involvement or declined comment.

However, coaches are looking for other things before the season kicks off on Sept. 2.

"Your first scrimmage, you want to get your basics ironed out," Gilsky said. "When you come in you say 'This is what I want.' You don't necessarily want to win the scrimmage, but you want to win the scrimmage. You want to find out if you have heart on the field, if you have toughness.

"Your first scrimmage, you want to get your basics ironed out."

"If there are any mistakes, are they aggressive mistakes? I can handle that in the first two scrimmages, but not the games."

Coaches expect their returning starters to perform as close as possible to how they will during the season. After all, many of them have been involved throughout the summer at voluntary practices and non-contact 7-on-7 passing scrimmages against other schools.

Of course, they're also looking for that diamond-in-the-rough, a player who might not have shined during the first week of two-a-day practices.

"You go into a scrimmage you kind of test the players who are back, but you know how they're going to react during the game," said Hanover Area coach Ron Hummer, whose team scrimmages at Riverside at 10 a.m. tomorrow. "You put a lot of pressure on the younger guys to see if they're picking up what you taught the first week of doubles and in the summer and see what guy stands out.

"You're always looking to see who's going to help you and be a surprise to get on the field. That's what a scrimmage is for. You have two weeks to really look at those kids that are going to work their tails off to get on the field."

Second scrimmages for most WVC teams will be Friday, Aug. 26. Holy Redeemer and Lehman will have their second scrimmages the morning of Saturday, Aug. 27.

with Gwinnett on August 9. They defeated the Braves 4-3 in eight innings. Durham improved to 71-52 on the season.

Dellin Betances (0-1, 4.50 ERA) showed promise in a losing effort. The tall right-hander allowed just three runs on seven hits. He struck out eight Bulls and didn't walk a batter in his Triple-A debut.

"It felt good. I tried to go out and just throw strikes and let the defense work," Betances said of his Triple-A debut. "I just made a couple of mistakes and they took advantage of them."

Next Game: 7:05 p.m. today versus Durham at PNC Field
Probable Pitchers: Yankees RHP David Phelps (4-6, 3.38) vs. Bulls RHP Brian Baker (7-7, 6.07)
On Deck: The Yankees hit the road for two games in Rochester Saturday and Sunday and return to PNC Field on Monday.
Note: Tonight's game will feature post-game fireworks.

He got over his pre-game jitters real quick.

"I usually get a little nervous right before the first pitch," Betances said. "But, after I threw the first pitch I was fine. I actually felt really good."

Alex Torres (9-6, 3.05) earned the win for Durham tossing seven innings of shutout baseball allowing just four hits. He walked three and struck out seven.

Yankee Notes

The Yankees released veteran right-hander Buddy Carlye. The move was made to make room for Raul Valdes. Carlyle was 2-2 with an ERA of 3.98 in 27 appearances on the mound for Scranton/Wilkes-Barre.

Valdes, a lefty, pitched a perfect inning of relief on Thursday with one strikeout.

The Yankees tied a franchise record for grounding into double plays with five. There were six total double plays between the teams. All were grounded into with the exception of when Kevin Russo doubled up Matt Carson at first base in the fourth.

double with two outs.

"I felt kind of nervous (initially) because we're in Williamsport and pretty much nationals, and I didn't know what to expect," said the red-freckled Kieckbusch, 12, as he flashed a slight grin. "As the game went on, I kind of relaxed."

Mexicali, Mexico, shut out Kaoshiung, Taiwan, 3-0 in the series' first game Thursday behind a two-hitter by flame-throwing righty Jorge Jacobo. He's just 12, too.

Hamamatsu City, Japan, beat Oranjestad, Aruba, 12-1, but the game had added meaning for the Japan squad after a survivor of this year's earthquake and tsunami threw out the ceremonial first pitch.

"I told the kids that they should appreciate that they are here to play a game," manager Akihiro Suzuki said through translator Kotaro Omori. "It should teach them to keep working hard and that it's only a sport."

Lafayette, La., shut out Warner Robins, Ga., 2-0 in an entertaining nightcap featuring solid pitching and good fielding by each squad. Both towns have previously sent teams to South Williamsport.

In contrast, no one from Billings — let alone, Montana — had ever set foot on the picturesque Little League complex for a World Series game until Thursday.

Montana trailed 2-0 after two innings before breaking through in the fourth against South Dakota starter Brett Beyer, working deep into counts to get runners on base.

Kieckbusch's high fly to shallow center fell just in between two fielders to score two runners with the bases loaded. The next hitter, McKenzie, lined an opposite-field double to the left-field wall to score two more runs for a 6-2 lead.

Louisiana 2, Georgia 0

Georgia broke through against Louisiana starter Ethan Hines to load the bases with nobody out in the sixth, but reliever Haden Erbe came out to get the final three outs for the save, including a Dillon Toms' comebacker to end the game.

Erbe also made a strong throw from the hole to outstretched first baseman Austin Primeaux with two outs and two runners on in the third to end another rally.

Logan Arnett went 3 for 3 to lead Georgia.

Mexico 3, Taiwan 0

Jacobo overpowered Taiwan with 12 strikeouts, including the final five outs. It was the first time a Taiwan team had been shut out in 55 games at the series.

Jacobo helped his cause at the plate, too, doubling home the first run and finishing 1 for 3 with two runs.

Like a seasoned major leaguer, Jacobo, 12, shared the credit for his memorable afternoon.

"My teammates gave me a jump-start at the beginning and that helped my confidence," Jacobo said through interpreter Sergio Guzman.

Japan 12, Aruba 1

Yoshiki Suzuki, no relation to his manager, hit a grand slam and Mitsuhiro Uchida added three hits and three RBIs in a game that ended after four innings due to Little League's 10-run rule. Suzuki also pitched, striking out five in 2 2-3 innings for the win.

Irish looking to get their kicks

Notre Dame's kicking game planning to make things Ruffer on opponents again.

By BRIAN HAMILTON
Chicago Tribune

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — At a recent lunch, David Ruffer scanned his table. The Notre Dame placekicker noted just one scholarship player sitting with a pack of walk-ons, and he glibly cracked that one of these things was least like the others.

After a beat, a friend offered Ruffer a real boot in the pants: Uh, you're on scholarship now, too.

"I was like, 'Oh shoot,'" Ruffer said. "I still have the mentality that I'm a walk-on. Although I give some of my friends a hard time about it."

It's somewhat emblematic of the line Ruffer must toe this season. Nothing is exactly the same year to year but the Irish wouldn't want to change a thing about their kicker, not after he missed just one field goal in 2010 after connecting on his first 23 career attempts.

That earned Ruffer a full ride for his fifth and final season and, inevitably, a bit more scrutiny. Nearly perfect is no longer perfect enough.

"Even though he made every kick, they weren't all beautiful," said Mike Elston, the Irish assistant in charge of special teams. "He can improve on his height through the line of scrimmage, he can improve on his stance, he can improve on his operation time, and he has done that."

Ruffer was 18-of-19 on field goals and 37-of-40 on extra points, so technically there's room for improvement. But improvement doesn't require a mechanical overhaul.

"I'm trying to go back to the same things I was doing last year that got me to that point," Ruffer said. "Working on the same dry runs, one-steps, full steps — the same process. You have to get involved in the process as much as you can and not so much worry about the result, especially when you're practicing. If you take care of the process, the result is going to take care of itself."

Elston says Ruffer improved his length, directional kicking and hang time enough to move into consideration for kickoff duty, one tangible advance from 2010.

The challenge there is familiar to Ruffer, a former one-handicap golfer: Creating more force without creating a new motion.

"You have to find your tempo," Ruffer said. "Some people swing fast, some people swing smooth, you just have to find what works for you and have to replicate it."

Asked recently how his kicker had performed in the preseason, Irish coach Brian Kelly said simply and tellingly: "He's been David Ruffer."

Scholarship or not, no complaints for Notre Dame if he stays that way.

a charity auction and left them behind. When the Mannings finally got back into their house, every shirt in the stack that Peyton signed had been stolen. Eli's jerseys still sat on a table, barely ruffled.

Long after those jerseys shot up in value, Manning still says little. He's got fewer Super Bowl wins than Brady (three) and Ben Roethlisberger (two), but just as many as Peyton, Drew Brees and Aaron Rodgers. His passing statistics, generally, would rank him somewhere at the back of that pack, and it's easy to argue that a few who haven't won it all — Michael Vick, Matt Ryan and Philip Rivers — would give Manning some competition for the spot. But in terms of elite quarterbacks at the moment, that's about it.

So the real news isn't that Manning was spot-on with his self-assessment, but that he actually said it out loud. He's shouldered his unfair share of criticism — think Tiki Barber — and usually responded by biting his lip. He caught plenty of heat for piling up a league-high 25 interceptions last season, even though there was more than enough blame to go around. Some were the result of blown routes and 50-50 throws at the end of games the Giants had little hope of winning. Manning took the blame for nearly every one, because that's what leaders do.

It's also why he owns the Giants locker room the same way that Brady, his brother and the league's other elite QBs do — but not as loudly. If Manning is serious about turning up the volume, chances are good he'll find plenty of teammates more than willing to back up just about anything he says.

Pryor in draft, but will miss first five games

Players union raises questions about the controversial ruling by NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell.

By DAVE SKRETTA
AP Sports Writer

Pryor

Terrelle Pryor will have an opportunity to pursue his NFL dreams, with one significant caveat: The former Ohio State star must still pay for breaking NCAA rules while he was in college.

The league announced Thursday that Pryor is eligible for its supplemental draft, but he won't be allowed to practice for the team that selects him until Week 6. Pryor gave up his final season with the Buckeyes following an investigation into the team's memorabilia-for-cash scandal.

He would've had to sit out five games had he chosen to return to Ohio State.

"We accept that voluntarily," Pryor's agent, Drew Rosenhaus, told The Associated Press. "It's a small price to pay for him to have a chance to pursue his dream of playing in the NFL."

A small price that could have broader consequences.

Commissioner Roger Goodell and NFLPA executive director DeMaurice Smith worked together on the decision, Rosenhaus said. The league hopes it will dissuade future college players who run afoul of the NCAA from trying to use the NFL as a means of escaping punishment. But it also creates this dilemma: Does the NFL have the authority to suspend a player who doesn't even work for the NFL yet?

"I know players are concerned about the message this sends," said Browns linebacker Scott Fujita, a member of the players' executive committee. "Granted, making this 'deal' was an individual decision made by a player with counsel from his agent and lawyer. They have every right to make whatever deal they want for his personal future. That being said, the general concern now is how far into Pandora's box this may go.

"This raises so many questions, and I think players are rightfully concerned."

The league informed clubs that Pryor "made decisions that undermine the integrity of the eligibility rules for the NFL draft." Among those actions, the league said, were the hiring of an agent in violation of NCAA rules and a failure to cooperate with the investigation that cost Ohio State coach Jim Tressel his job. The NCAA committee on infractions is working to determine the school's final penalties.

League spokesman Greg Aiello tweeted you can't break the rules as Pryor did "and get a free pass into the NFL."

Goodell did not confer with NCAA President Mark Emmert on the decision, said Bob Williams, a spokesman for the college sports governing body. The commissioner "called Mark to inform him of his intent. Nothing more," Williams said.

One of the points of contention during negotiations for a new NFL labor agreement was the authority given to the commissioner to hand out punishment. In the end, there were no changes to Goodell's position, but his decision to suspend Pryor worried players.

"It's a little questionable, but I guess they're really trying to not allow guys to manipulate the NCAA system and be able to take a quicker path to the NFL," said Bills safety George Wilson, an NFLPA representative. "I see what the commissioner's trying to do at his end as well, but it's still tough to take."

"It's still a tough pill to take, knowing that you're being suspended for something that took place while you were at college. But we'll see what happens."

David Cornwell, Pryor's attorney, said he was pleased that quarterback is eligible for the supplemental draft — which was his "primary objective" — although having to sit out five games was not the ideal situation.

"The NFL's concern all along was protecting the integrity of the draft process," Cornwell said in an email to the AP. "We understood their concerns, accept that they are legitimate concerns, and worked through the process to demonstrate that Terrelle's decisions regarding making himself eligible were reasonable, if not perfect. The commissioner gave serious consideration to the various issues and decided to balance those issues by allowing Terrelle into the supplemental draft with conditions."

Vick's lane to Philly was cleared

The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Michael Vick is glad he chose the Philadelphia Eagles, even if he had more attractive options.

After telling GQ magazine that he didn't want to come to Philadelphia to be a third-string quarterback following his release from federal prison two years ago, Vick clarified his remarks on Thursday.

"I did speak with many people, but the decision to sign in Philadelphia was based on my discussions with my agent, my family and with Coach (Andy) Reid," Vick said in a statement released hours before the Eagles played the Steelers in a preseason game.

"And after those discussions, it became clear to me that this was the place I wanted to play and resume my NFL career. The commissioner never told me to sign or not sign with particular teams. Again, I want to make it perfectly clear that this was a decision I made and, as I have said numerous times before, I'm very happy with the way it has worked out for me and my family."

Vick rejuvenated his career with the Eagles, started in the Pro Bowl last year and finished runner-up to Tom Brady for NFL MVP.

In the September issue of GQ, Vick says that he consulted with Commissioner Roger Goodell before signing with Philadelphia.

"I think I can say this now, because it's not going to hurt anybody's feelings, and it's the truth," Vick says. "I didn't want to come to Philadelphia. Being the third-team quarterback is nothing to smile about. Cincinnati and Buffalo were better options."

The article states: "After meeting with Commissioner Roger Goodell and other reps from the NFL, Vick was convinced — and granted league approval — to sign with Philly."

Vick is then quoted saying: "And I commend and thank them, because they put me in the right situation."

But Vick's statement Thursday contradicts comments in the story.

JETS

FLORHAM PARK, N.J. — New York Jets running back Shonn Greene has a "low-grade skin infection" on his right foot and will not play in the team's preseason game against Cincinnati on Sunday night.

Team spokesman Bruce Speight says Thursday night that the infection was caught early and is being treated "appropriately with antibiotics."

Greene, expected to be the starting running back this season, was being treated at the team's facility.

The team did not immediately know if it is a staph infection because the type of skin infection Greene has cannot be cultured. Typically, only open wounds can be cultured. With Greene out on Sunday and Joe McKnight healing from a concussion, LaDainian Tomlinson, Bilal Powell and Chris Jennings will handle the carries.

CAMPS ROUNDUP

VIKINGS

MINNEAPOLIS — Receiver Percy Harvin and tight end Visanthe Shiancoe are among the Minnesota Vikings who will be held out of Saturday's preseason game at Seattle.

Harvin hasn't practiced much this week because of a rib injury, and Shiancoe is still working on a pulled hamstring that kept him out of the preseason opener.

"I think we'll do that with both of them and just give them a chance to get a few more days of rest and then get ready to go next week," coach Leslie Frazier said on Thursday.

Right guard Anthony Herrera and cornerback Asher Allen also will miss the game. Herrera practiced for the first time this week in his bid to return from a torn knee ligament. Allen has a toe injury.

Receiver Greg Camarillo won't play because of a groin injury, which opens up playing time at the crowded position.

Harvin, Michael Jenkins and Bernard Berrian are the top three receivers on the depth chart and the only locks to make the team. After that, a cluster could be competing for two roster spots.

That list includes Camarillo, Devin Aromashodu, who was signed away from Chicago in the offseason, Jaymar Johnson, whose return skills could give him an edge, Juaquin Iglesias, and CFL transplant Manny Arcenaux.

BRONCOS

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — Denver Broncos defensive tackle Ty Warren will undergo surgery Tuesday to repair his partially torn right triceps.

Coach John Fox said Thursday that the Broncos won't place him on injured reserve. The team is hoping he can return to play in November.

They should get a better idea if that's possible after the operation.

"He's not going to be on I.R. at this point, so nothing's ruled out," Fox said.

Warren was the Broncos' top free agency acquisition, signing a two-year, $8 million deal two weeks ago that included a $2.5 million signing bonus and $1.5 million in salary this season.

Warren, who was cut by New England last month, spent last season on I.R. with a hip injury.

Warren was hurt during practice Monday after lining up alongside Marcus Thomas, who strained his right pectoral muscle during a 1-on-1 drill.

BILLS

PITTSFORD, N.Y. — Buffalo Bills linebacker Shawne Merriman will miss the team's preseason game at Denver on Saturday to rest a sore right knee.

Coach Chan Gailey calls the decision to rest Merriman a precaution. He adds Merriman would have likely played if this were a regular-season game.

Merriman has missed the past two days since hurting his knee during a pass-rushing drill. He had two sacks in Buffalo's 10-3 preseason-opening loss at Chicago last weekend.

Receiver Roscoe Parrish will also sit out after missing a week of practice due to a leg injury.

The Bills wrapped up three weeks of training camp in suburban Rochester on Thursday and will resume practicing at their headquarters in Orchard Park next week.

COLTS

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indianapolis Colts are pitching in to help the victims of the Indiana State Fair stage collapse that killed five people and injured dozens of others.

Colts owner Jim Irsay said Thursday that he plans to donate $1 for each ticket distributed at Friday night's preseason game at home against the Washington Redskins.

The fund is intended to help victims and families of those who were killed or injured. The Colts also plan to have a moment of silence before the game and are urging fans to make a $10 donation to the fund.

Irsay says the community was "shaken to the core" and calls it a "heartbreaking accident."

Central Indiana Community Foundation spokesman Mike Knight said a relocated fair concert by Train and Maroon 5 at Conseco Fieldhouse on Thursday was expected to raise at least $300,000 for the fund.

RAMS

ST. LOUIS — Former St. Louis coach Dick Vermeil says his Rams would not have won the Super Bowl under the new, limited practice rules of the NFL.

Vermeil visited the Rams on Thursday. Famous for his tough training camps, he says the Rams would not have won it all in 1999 without being able to practice the way they did.

Under the new collective bargaining agreement, the mandatory veteran reporting date is no earlier than 15 days before the first preseason game. The first day is limited to physicals and meetings, and the second and third day workouts have no pads or contact.

COWBOYS

IRVING, Texas — The air was hot, the grass was real and the guys on the other side of scrimmage wore different uniforms. It was a practice unlike anything the Dallas Cowboys have had this preseason.

The 4 a.m. Pacific time wake-up call was different for the San Diego Chargers, too.

The Cowboys and Chargers spent the first of three days together Thursday with a morning workout on the outdoor fields at Cowboys' headquarters. They squared off for almost two hours, leaving around the time temperatures made their near-daily bolt beyond 100 degrees.

Philip Rivers threw against DeMarcus Ware and the Dallas starting defense, and Tony Romo threw against Shaun Phillips and San Diego's starting defense on separate fields. Many of the drills were the same as the teams would run in their usual practice, spiced up because they were going against foes instead of teammates. There will be more of the same in a controlled scrimmage Friday at Cowboys Stadium, then the preseason game Sunday night.

"Sometimes you can get comfortable working against the same guys," Cowboys coach Jason Garrett said.

The early start — 9 a.m. local time, but 7 a.m. to the Chargers' body clocks — was a necessity, since it allowed the work to be done with temperatures still in double-digits.

San Diego coach Norv Turner said that helped fit the theme of shaking guys from their comfort zones.

EXHIBITION ROUNDUP

PITTSBURGH — Ben Roethlisberger completed 8 of 12 passes for 125 yards and a pair of touchdowns as the Pittsburgh Steelers cruised by the Philadelphia Eagles 24-14 on Thursday night.

Roethlisberger directed the defending AFC champions to touchdowns on both drives he played, hitting Antonio Brown for a 29-yard score in the first quarter and veteran Hines Ward on a 20-yard strike in the second.

Philadelphia quarterback Michael Vick started the day clarifying comments he made in a "GQ" article in which he suggested NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell convinced him to sign with the Eagles as a backup two years ago rather than compete for a starting job elsewhere.

His night wasn't any better.

Patriots 31, Buccaneers 14

TAMPA, Fla. — Tom Brady showed midseason form in his preseason debut.

After sitting out New England's preseason opener in Week 1, the reigning NFL MVP tossed a pair of touchdowns and completed 11 of 19 passes in the New England Patriots' 31-17 win over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers on Thursday night.

Brady threw for 118 yards in one half of work, and connected on scoring strikes from 16 yards to Aaron Hernandez, and 8 yards out to Chad Ochocinco, who also both made their debuts.

BenJarvus Green-Ellis also got in on the act, rushing 11 times for 51 yards and two touchdowns.

Patriots coach Bill Belichick called this a big week for his team in regards to position battles and roster spots. It included three straight days of full-pad practices, creating what some players characterized as a regular-season atmosphere.

The pace seemed to be there as Brady and the rest of the first unit played all six offensive series of the first half, failing to score on only two. They scored on four of their first five drives.

Buccaneers coach Raheem Morris had a tough time finding any fault with his team's effort in a 25-0 rout at Kansas City last week. But this week was more than a small reversal of fortune.

Third-year quarterback Josh Freeman, who was Brady-like against the Chiefs, misfired on his first three passes of the night to set a bad tone the Bucs never got over.

He was done after five series, connecting on 5 of 10 passes for just 33 yards. The Buccaneers had more than that in penalty yards in the first half. They were whistled 10 times for 85 yards, as New England built a 28-0 halftime lead.

Freeman was also sacked twice by the Patriots, who held Tampa Bay to just 73 total yards and four first downs in the opening half. Patriots linebacker Jerod Mayo got credit for both sacks, to go along with five tackles.

The Buccaneers didn't get on the board until early in the third quarter when cornerback Elbert Mack intercepted Ryan Mallett and returned it 69 yards for the score.

Their lone offensive score came early in the third quarter when third-string running back Allen Bradford capped a 12-play, 84-yard drive with 2-yard touchdown run. They were just two of the Bucs' 64 yards rushing.

But, by then it was seemed clear to the already thinning Raymond James Stadium crowd that it was not Tampa Bay's night and that their team still has a lot of work to do before the regular season.

Tampa Bay (1-1) will host Miami next Saturday night. New England (2-0) will travel to play at Detroit.

International Cycling Union president Pat McQuaid says the sport is 'looking toward a golden era,' and regaining credibility after years of doping scandals.

Speeding toward 'Golden Era'

By GRAHAM DUNBAR
AP Sports Writer

AIGLE, Switzerland – After years of doping scandals in which the very legitimacy of his sport was questioned, Pat McQuaid says cycling's best days await.

The president of cycling's governing body points to this year's "superb" Tour de France with young riders competing free of drugs, developments that will help attract new sponsors and race organizers worldwide.

"We are looking towards a golden era," McQuaid told The Associated Press. "We are certainly coming out of a dark period, and we're not yet through everything. From the anti-doping point of view, we must not take our foot off the pedal."

McQuaid urged professional teams, with whom he has sparred this season, to back the International Cycling Union's leadership and its strategy of taking cycling to such countries as China, Russia and Brazil.

"It needs everybody working in that direction, but it has to be led by the UCI, working with governments to deliver the products that we want," he said.

McQuaid reflected on the season in road racing, the discipline that largely shapes public perception of cycling, after overseeing the 2012 Olympic test event in London last Sunday.

The dress rehearsal road race was won by home favorite Mark Cavendish. The British sprint star has helped ensure that riders — like Philippe Gilbert, Tour winner Cadel Evans and Thomas Voeckler — rather than dopers have dominated the headlines.

"This year has been a very good year so far," McQuaid said. "We had excellent racing in the (spring) classics and everything about the Tour de France was superb."

McQuaid said the sport is gradually regaining its credibility.

"You get a lot of young riders coming through and believing each other that they are clean — which gives them the confidence that they won't come under pressure to go into a doping program."

The only doping blight on the Tour, Russian rider Alexandr Kolobnev's positive test for a banned diuretic, proved a distraction ahead of stage 10 rather than a crisis.

McQuaid, however, is not celebrating victory yet.

"You don't change the culture overnight. It takes a couple of years and it's still a work in progress," the Irishman acknowledged. "We must continue to do targeted, intelligent testing."

Eventually, riders' confidence in each other will be shared by the fans, media and finally major companies wanting to invest in cycling, McQuaid said.

The UCI leader has staked much of his credibility since 2005 on taking a global view of the sport's future beyond Europe — a strategy he believes is justified by the continent's economic problems.

McQuaid was elected to the International Olympic Committee last year, allowing him to help develop new cycling markets in such countries as Brazil and Colombia.

"I need my IOC colleagues to open the doors for me and he will do that because he trusts the UCI and trusts the credibility of the sport," he said.

There are investigations involving winners of 10 of the past 13 Tours de France, Lance Armstrong and Alberto Contador.

NHL

Deep idea of shallow net

League considers testing of new cage that will also provide clearer replay images.

The Associated Press

TORONTO — Nets used in NHL games could be changing as soon as this season.

While the size of the nets isn't going to be altered, the depth is likely to undergo a makeover. After using a shallower model over two days at the research and development camp, NHL executive Brendan Shanahan indicated that the new nets might be tested during the preseason.

"I think that the shallow nets are something that I'd really like to try in at least an exhibition game and see how players react to it," Shanahan said Thursday.

The new design is 40 inches deep as opposed to the traditional 44 inches. It also features a clear plastic strip along the top, thinner mesh and a built-in high definition camera — changes intended to make video review decisions easier.

Shanahan also is in favor of a new "verification line" that runs 3 inches behind the goal line and can be used in video review to help determine if a puck completely entered the net.

Since the changes being discussed won't impact the rule book, the procedure for implementing them is still being ironed out. They will likely be used during training camps and preseason games before the hockey operations department makes a decision on whether they will be used during the regular season.

"We're talking about the process and the steps that would go forward for that," Shanahan said.

Some teams have expressed a willingness to take part in further tests.

"We told the league, anything you want to try in the preseason game we're willing to try," Toronto Maple Leafs general manager Brian Burke said. "If this is a first look at it with 17 year olds — albeit highly skilled 17 year olds — and the league feels like they need to look at it with NHL players, we're willing to try it in our preseason games.

"We'll try the nets, the cameras, any rule changes they want to try. The other team has to consent, but if they need a guinea pig, we'll be the guinea pig."

The two coaches working the benches at the research and development camp both liked what they saw from the new nets. Dave Tippett of the Phoenix Coyotes and Dan Bylsma of the Pittsburgh Penguins had players commenting on the extra room the thinner nets create behind the goal, in front of the end boards.

"It's a small variation," Tippett said. "What you're doing is giving players more space to play. I don't think it has a negative effect on the game whatsoever. It's only a positive."

Another change likely coming to NHL arenas is a spring-loaded piece of curved glass near the benches designed to protect players from the stanchion. Montreal Canadiens forward Max Pacioretty sustained a concussion last season after taking a hit from Boston Bruins defenseman Zdeno Chara that slammed him into a post.

"The curved glass, I think there's a really good chance we're going to see that in NHL games this year," Shanahan said. "I think we all agree that the curved glass makes the playing environment safer for our players, so we want to have it in the game."

During the two-day camp, coaches oversaw a group of 36 top-rated prospects for the 2012 draft. They held three scrimmages featuring a variety of different rules governing power plays, faceoffs, icing and other infractions before wrapping up Thursday's final session with a skills competition.

It was an intense couple of days for teenagers looking to make an impression on the numerous scouts and general managers in attendance.

"It was pretty tough to adjust (to the different rules)," Ottawa 67's defenseman Cody Ceci said. "I've been playing the same game of hockey since I've grown up. Just to see all these rules change — you've just got to stay on your toes and think a lot more than you usually do."

None of these rules changes are expected to be adopted by the NHL anytime soon.

However, the league wants to continue testing new ideas and gathering information.

Pressure's on defending champ

Defending state gold medalist Matthews returns eyeing another PIAA run.

By DAVE ROSENGRANT
drosengrant@timesleader.com

For the first time in 28 years, the Wyoming Valley Conference golf campaign begins after a season when a state championship was crowned.

This time, Brandon Matthews returns to Pittston Area for his senior season after claiming a PIAA championship and going on one of the most memorable runs in recent history. He became the first state titlist from the WVC since Ted Tryba won a gold medal in 1983.

Matthews pulled out several wins in 2010 with his only loss coming in the regional tournament, where he finished tied for fifth. He continued his success this summer winning more events, including the Golf Association of Philadelphia Junior Boys championship.

Now, his toughest test is abroad as he begins a quest to become a two-time state champion.

"At his level, I compare him to Tiger (Woods) in his hey day, meaning he can win with his B-game," Pittston Area coach Len Benfante said. "Golf is a strange game. For him the pressure is getting back to states."

One might think that Matthews would be a scary site for other coaches in the conference, but that's not the case.

"It's going to be a blast being able to watch that kid one more year," Tunkhannock coach Andy Neely said. "Once in a while you get to see a talent like that and it's an honor to get to be a spectator for him again."

Matthews' quest at more gold is just one of several storylines for the 2011 season, which begins today with six teams in action.

Here's a look at some other featured points of interest for the new campaign:

A REDEEMER REPEAT?

Holy Redeemer won the WVC team championship last year with a young team consisting of just two seniors and a boatload of freshmen. This year, the Royals will be looking to claim another championship with eight underclassmen and just three 12th-graders.

The team will get strong competition from Pittston Area, which didn't lose any starters from last year's squad that finished second in the league to the Royals.

"With us and Pittston, they're going to be powerhouses," Redeemer coach Art Brunn Jr. said. "But I think our teams are going to be so evenly matched, it's going to come down to whoever plays best."

COMING UP

Today: The high school golf season begins with three matches.
Monday: Sixteen of the 17 teams will be action.
Tuesday: A closer look at all 17 teams with the WVC Golf Capsules in The Times Leader.

REMEMBERING A LEGEND

For 37 years, Tom Tryba walked around area golf courses mentoring youngsters as coach or bystander. Unfortunately, the area icon passed away in May. He was so legendary that he had a tournament named in his honor in 2002. The 10th annual Tryba Preseason Tournament will be held on Aug. 29 at Fox Hill Country Club.

"It's going to be strange to not see him because he always came to the big matches," Brunn said. "That will be the real difference for me this season."

TOP TEAMS

Crestwood: Comets coach Mark Jarolen always seems to have his team in contention. Crestwood has many players returning from last year's Southern Division championship including Times Leader All-Star Jake Popowycz. Crestwood is searching for its fourth straight division title.

Holy Redeemer: A 10-0 record in 2010 was astonishing for the Royals, who also claimed the championships at the Preseason Tryba and Pre-District tournaments. What's equally impressive is that the team recorded all those wins with nearly a dozen underclassmen contributing at some points in the season. They are primed to make a run at their second straight WVC title.

Pittston Area: The only loss the Patriots were hit with last season en route to the East Division crown was to Holy Redeemer in a crossover match. If there's a team ready to challenge the Royals this year, it's the Patriots, who return every starter from last year. They will likely get better as the season progresses having to compete possibly the toughest division with Coughlin, Wyoming Area and Tunkhannock.

Wyoming Valley West: The Spartans shocked the WVC by claiming its first golf championship in 39 years last season when it claimed the North Division title. The Spartans lost their top two golfers from last year, but that's it. They had much depth last year and return several players from that squad. The road to the title wasn't easy in 2010 and it won't be easy in 2011 either with Dallas, Wyoming Seminary and Lake-Lehman also in the North.

TOP PLAYERS

Brandon Matthews, Sr., Pittston Area: The reigning Times Leader Golfer of the Year was only handed one defeat last year en route to becoming the first PIAA Champion in golf for the Wyoming Valley Conference since Ted Tryba, from Hanover Area, won in 1983. He was also the first WVC golfer to claim a district title since 2002 and the first player to win the WVC Preseason Tryba Tournament three times.

BILL TARUTIS/FOR THE TIMES LEADER

PIAA state champion Brandon Matthews watches his putt on the 11th green in the championship flight of the John Allan Tournament on Sunday evening.

Shamus Gartley, Jr., Coughlin: He rose onto the scene in the summer of 2010 in local amateur tournaments and continued to succeed last season taking 11th at the Pre-District Tournament to qualify for the District 2 Tournament for the first time. He followed that performance with a fourth-place showing at districts to advance to the regional tournament.

Jake Popowycz, Jr., Crestwood: He helped the Comets claim a division title last year and capped that by placing second at the Pre-District Tournament. He got recognized early last year when he placed fourth at the preseason event.

Chase Makowski and Mariano Medico, Sophomores, Holy Redeemer: The duo are very similar in every aspect of their game. Last year, they even tied at the District 2 Tournament – each finishing two shots out of an eighth-place finish. They were tied for 11th, two places out of the final spot that advances to the regional tournament. They also claimed first team recognition on the WVC Coach's All-Star Team in 2010.

Penguins open season against rival Bears

tvenesky@timesleader.com

Some things never change, and for the Wilkes-Barre/Scranton Penguins and their fans that's a good thing.

For the fourth time in the last five seasons, the Penguins open the season at home against the rival Hershey Bears.

Other than that, however, there's plenty of changes in this season's Penguins schedule, which was released by the American Hockey League on Thursday afternoon.

Highlights include:

- No more four games in five days
- Season shortened from 80 to 76 games
- A back-to-back series on the road against the St. John's IceCaps in Newfoundland in January
- And a home game on New Year's Eve against the Bridgeport Sound Tigers that could bring a familiar face back to Wilkes-Barre

Penguins head coach John Hynes said he's glad to see the demise of four-in-fives, adding such stretches were demanding and taxing on players.

"It's not so much playing the games, it's the recovery afterward that breaks players down," Hynes said.

And shortening the season by four games will also be a benefit to the players and fans, Hynes said.

"It's great for the developmental process because there's more time to rest, which means more recovery time or practice," Hynes said. "Also, the games will be more intense because there will be less travel and less wear and tear on the players."

Although the lengthiest road trip for the Penguins will be a reasonable four games (Oct. 21-29 and March 9-14), the schedule does require five trips to face the Norfolk Admirals.

Hynes said playing in Norfolk is something the Penguins look forward to, especially after having built a rivalry against the Admirals in last season's Calder Cup playoffs.

"It's a great place to play and we have a routine when we're down there," Hynes said. "The Admirals have become a pretty big rival."

The other road trip that has Hynes excited is the pair of games in Newfoundland to face the IceCaps.

"St. John's is a great hockey town, and it's an old AHL town with a lot of history," he said. "Anytime you can go into Canada to play in a place like that is exciting."

But not as exciting as playing at home, which the Penguins will do for the first two games of the season on Saturday, Oct. 8 and Sunday, Oct. 9.

For Hynes, that may be the best part of the schedule. Opening at home allows the Penguins to practice for a full week, get in a routine and, when the puck drops, continue building on what they created last year.

"We want to be a tough building to play in, and that starts with our first home game," Hynes said.

The schedule may also feature a homecoming for one of the longest-tenured Penguins in team history. Tim Wallace, who spent the last five seasons with the Penguins and is third on the franchise list in games played (304), signed a two-way, one year contract with the New York Islanders this summer. If Wallace happens to be with the Islanders AHL affiliate, Bridgeport, on Dec. 31, he'll return to Wilkes-Barre when the Sound Tigers take on the Penguins.

"Tim Wallace was a great Penguin. We all have a tremendous amount of respect for him," Hynes said. "He gave a lot of blood and sweat in a Penguins uniform."

Until then, Hynes and his staff will head to Pittsburgh for coach's meetings on Sunday and Monday, and then he'll return to Wilkes-Barre to plan for training camp and make travel arrangements for the upcoming season.

PRO GOLF

Quinney, Gainey share 1st-round lead at Wyndham

The Associated Press

GREENSBORO, N.C. — If Jeff Quinney keeps this up, he might soon have a new PGA Tour card — and a spot in the playoffs.

Quinney and Tommy Gainey shot 7-under 63s on Thursday to share the lead after one round in the Wyndham Championship.

Quinney had eight birdies, including five in a row early in his round, to start strong in his last chance to qualify for golf's postseason.

Gainey had five birdies and an eagle in matching his career-best round. Both players are chasing their first PGA Tour victory.

Stuart Appleby had a 64. Ten players — Paul Casey, Carl Pettersson, Ernie Els, Jason Bohn, Jimmy Walker, Tim Herron, Lee Janzen, Jim Furyk, Vijay Singh and George McNeill — shot 65s during another low-scoring day at Sedgefield Country Club.

Quinney arrived in 215th place in the FedEx Cup standings. A win — and the 500 points that accompany it — would put him in The Barclays.

"The only chance I get in the playoffs is probably winning this week, and coming with the attitude of 'all-in,'" Quinney said. "Basically, just push all your chips in, and this is what I got."

A year ago, a close-but-not-enough finish on this course left Quinney outside the playoff field. He wound up in 126th place, falling short of the postseason by three points.

Jeff Quinney lines up a putt on the ninth hole during the first round of the Wyndham Championship golf tournament in Greensboro, N.C., Thursday .

He spent most of the first day of his return to the par-70 Sedgefield layout near the top of the leaderboard after his early flurry of birdies.

Starting on the back nine, Quinney birdied Nos. 12-16 to move to 5 under. After a bogey on No. 18, he added three more birdies on his final nine holes and closed by sticking his 140-yard approach shot within 3 feet and sinking that putt for his eighth birdie.

"It's my last chance, and don't hold back, try to get out of my own way," Quinney said.

Senior Players Championship

HARRISON, N.Y. — Jeff Sluman shot a 6-under 65 to take a one-stroke lead after the first round of the Senior Players Championship, the Champions Tour's final major of the season.

Sluman, the winner last month at Pebble Beach, had seven birdies and a bogey on Westchester Country Club's tree-lined West Course. Gary Hallberg and Peter Senior opened with 66s.

Jay Haas, the 2009 winner, and Corey Pavin and Michael Allen were two strokes back at 67, and Fred Couples, defending champion Mark O'Meara and Tommy Armour III had 68s. Tom Watson struggled, shooting a 76.

Czech Open

CELADNA, Czech Republic — Ireland's Peter Lawrie shot a 6-under 66 to take a one-stroke lead after the first round of the Czech Open.

Ireland's Damien McGrane, France's Victor Dubuisson and Spain's Pedro Oriol opened with 67s. Spain's Miguel Angel Jimenez, the Spanish star who co-designed the Prosper course, had a 76.

MIXED MARTIAL ARTS

Fox, UFC ink deal to put fights on prime time

By GREG BEACHAM
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES — The UFC has made it to network prime-time programming.

Mixed martial arts' dominant promotional company announced a landmark seven-year deal with Fox on Thursday, putting four UFC shows on the main network each year and an extensive array of programming on its cable networks. The UFC will become a prominent feature on FX, with live fights on most Friday nights and a revamped version of "The Ultimate Fighter," the UFC's popular reality show.

UFC president Dana White says the deal is the biggest step yet in MMA's transformation from a banned fringe sport into a mainstream entertainment property. The UFC already is wildly popular among young men, but Fox will put the sport in front of an enormous new audience.

"This is what I always wanted, what I always thought was the pinnacle for us," White said. "This partnership is going to take this sport to the next level. Those people that thought I was a lunatic, saying this was going to be the biggest sport in the world, this is the next step."

Fox will allow the UFC to control its own production, a long-time stumbling block in White's negotiations with network TV over the past several years. Although the UFC is still in control, White says he wants "to make a fresh start" in every aspect of UFC's programming, working with Fox to improve even its pay-per-view broadcasts.

Fox Sports Chairman David Hill said the network won't have trouble selling network advertising for a violent, high-testosterone sport that's still viewed with an arched eyebrow by much of the public and media.

"TV is all about the next big thing, and that's what we're here for," Hill said. "We would not have gone into this deal if we had not canvassed a large pool of advertisers ... and found they were behind it."

Hill also had no problem leaving the UFC in charge of its own broadcasts.

"I think their production is first-class, and I doubt there's anything we could bring," he said.

The UFC's first prime-time fights on Fox will air Nov. 12. White is still working out details of the show, which likely will be held at Honda Center in Anaheim, Calif.

"The Ultimate Fighter" will move from Spike to FX next spring for its 15th edition. The show's competitive fights will air live on Friday nights, and its episodes will be filmed and released much faster than in its previous incarnation, which starts its 14th cycle on Spike this fall.

Most of the UFC programming currently airing on Versus also will move to FX, as will the behind-the-scenes reality shows leading up to major fights. Fuel, a lower-profile Fox cable channel, also will broadcast UFC programming.

Although the four Fox shows are the UFC's first regular spot on a broadcast network, the bulk of the UFC's programming will be on FX in its nearly 100 million homes. FX president John Landgraf has built a powerful lineup of critically acclaimed and highly-rated dramas and comedies over the past decade, but the network has spent years looking for sports programming to complement its scripted lineup, dabbling with NASCAR and college football in recent years.

AP PHOTO

DAILY FORECAST

We're starting off with a little sunshine and temperatures in the upper 50s and lower 60s. If you have outdoor plans today, bring your rain gear or umbrella. Showers and thunderstorms will develop during the afternoon, some of which may become severe. Remember, if you're outdoors and hear thunder or see lightning, find shelter until the storm passes. Most people are not aware that lightning is Mother Nature's number one killer. If you didn't know that, you do now. It's not something to mess around with. Besides the chance for a few severe storms, it's going to get warm again this afternoon with temperatures in the 80s. Any showers and thunderstorms that form during the afternoon will diminish this evening after the sun sets. Tonight will be partly cloudy and warm with overnight temperatures in the lower 60s.

Will Ann hold on to the momentum?

Ann Inc., the parent of Ann Taylor and Loft stores, had a strong first quarter. Earnings rose 21 percent because the retailer's online business surged. When it reports second-quarter results today, investors will want to hear if sales held up while consumers paid more for gas and started to worry more about the economy. Investors also want to know how sales are likely to do the rest of this year as consumer confidence falls.

The Cleveland Fed president speaks

Sandra Pianalto, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland, will be addressing a meeting of community bankers in Columbus.

She'll be taking questions and answers from the audience – the economy and how the U.S. Fed can help it is likely to be the biggest concern. The U.S. Fed said last week it expects to keep interest rates low into 2013. But Pianalto is likely to be asked: What else can the Fed do?

Tax-free weekend

Texas shoppers can get a break from state and local sales taxes this weekend as students prepare to return to school. The sales tax break runs Friday through Sunday and applies to most clothing, shoes, and school supplies priced under $100. At least 16 states have offered similar tax holidays to help increase spending. Still to come: Maryland's tax-fee week ends Saturday, and Connecticut's week runs Aug. 21-27.

IN BRIEF

Pa. unemployment rate up

The seasonally adjusted unemployment rate in Pennsylvania rose to 7.8 percent in July, up from 7.6 percent in June. The rate was 8.6 percent in July 2010.

The civilian labor force – people working or looking for work – fell 24,000 in July to 6.3 million. That also was 24,000 less than in July 2010. The number of people employed fell by 39,000 from June but was 26,000 higher than a year earlier.

In the 12 months since last July the number of jobs in goods-producing industries within the state grew 2.2 percent, led by a 17.5 percent gain in the mining and logging category. Service-providing jobes grew 1.1 percent in the same period, with the information technology and leisure and hospitality sectors growing more than twice that rate.

H-P lowers forecasts

Hewlett-Packard Co. reported an increase in its third-quarter net income on Thursday, but the technology company gave a lower-than-expected outlook for the current quarter and cut its revenue outlook for the year.

HP reported its earnings before the markets closed Thursday after saying it plans to spin off its PC business and stop selling its webOS tablet and mobile phones.

The company lowered its full-year revenue outlook slightly to $127.2 billion to $127.6 billion, down from its previous estimate of $129 billion to $130 billion.

AIG pays back $2B to U.S.

American International Group Inc. has paid the federal government $2.15 billion this week after selling off a life insurance subsidiary, trimming its financial bailout balance to roughly $51 billion.

AIG has now paid back $11.4 billion of the $68 billion in bailout funds it received from the government at the height of the 2008 financial crisis.

Treasury officials have said they expect to recoup the full amount of the bailout.

RIM jazzing up phones

Research In Motion Ltd. is trying to spice up its product line by releasing several BlackBerrys with touch screens and new software for better performance. In a first for the BlackBerry, a few can run on super-fast "4G" cellular networks, which wireless providers are rolling out.

The phones will be available from the major providers over the next several weeks at a wide range of prices — $50 to $300, with two-year contracts.

Here we go again: Another big Dow drop

By STAN CHOE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Just when Wall Street seemed to have settled down, a barrage of bad economic reports collided with fresh worries about European banks Thursday and triggered a global sell-off in stocks.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 419 points — a return to the wild swings that gripped the stock market last week.

Stocks were only part of a dramatic day across the financial markets. The price of oil fell $5, gold set another record, the 10-year Treasury hit its lowest yield, and the average mortgage rate fell to its lowest in at least 40 years.

Trader Steven Kaplan, right, watches the numbers as he works on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow is down 13.6 percent since stocks began falling July 21.

The selling began in Asia, where Japanese exports fell for a fifth straight month, and continued in Europe, where bank stocks were hammered because of worries about debt problems there, which have proved hard to contain.

On Wall Street, the losses wiped out much of the roughly 700 points that the Dow had gained over five days. Some investors who bought in the middle of last week decided to sell after they were confronted with a raft of bad news about the economy:

- More people joined the unemployment line last week than at any time in the past month. The number of people filing claims for unemployment benefits for the first time rose to 408,000, or 9,000 more than the week before.
- Inflation at the consumer level in July was the highest since March. More expensive gas, food, clothes and other necessities are squeezing household budgets at a time when most people aren't getting raises.
- Sales of previously occupied homes fell in July for the third time in

An unidentified student on Wednesday protests the working conditions at a Hershey Co. warehouse operated by Exel in Palmyra, Pa. About 150 picketed Wednesday at a protest organized by the National Guestworker Alliance.

Mood not so sweet

Foreign workers for Hershey protest conditions

By MARK SCOLFORO
Associated Press

HERSHEY — Foreign students brought to work at a candy warehouse protested conditions and pay for a second day Thursday, chanting on Chocolate Avenue under streetlights shaped like Hershey's Kisses, as the State Department said it was investigating.

More than 100 students gathered in touristy downtown Hershey, home to the nation's second-largest candy maker, arguing that they were employed under the guise of a cultural exchange but toil away in what amounts to a sweets sweatshop.

"All we can do is work and sleep," said Godwin Efobi, 26, a Ukrainian student originally from Nigeria.

The students, who protested with a bullhorn, leaflets and a petition they planned to present to Hershey executives, complain of hard physical labor, steep pay deductions for rent that often left them with little spending money and no cultural enrichment. They said their complaints were met with threats of deportation, prompting some to look for help.

A spokesman for the Hershey Co. would say only that the corporation expects its vendors to treat employees "fairly and equitably."

Lynn Anderson, a spokeswoman for Ohio-based Exel, which runs the warehouse, said the students' concerns hadn't been raised directly with the company, but that Exel is speaking to SHS Staffing Solutions, which helped place the students, about what's being done to address them. Messages left with SHS by The Associated Press weren't immediately returned Thursday.

The leader of the Council for Educational Travel USA, a nonprofit based in San Clemente, Calif., that also helped place the students, asserted the students' motives weren't entirely pure.

"Somebody has been circulating a letter that they will get several thousand dollars back if they protest and be a part of this movement," said CEO Rick Anaya.

The workers are among more than 100,000 college students who come to the U.S. each year on J-1 visas, which supply resorts and other businesses with cheap seasonal labor as part of a program aimed at fostering cultural understanding.

Two students from Central America complained to the state AFL-CIO this year, which referred the matter to the national office and the New Orleans-based National Guestworker Alliance, said Pennsylvania's AFL-CIO president, Rick Bloomingdale.

The walkout is in its second day. On Wednesday, about 150 people picketed outside the warehouse in a protest organized by the National Guestworker Alliance. Three people were arrested — including Bloomingdale and two other organized labor officials.

Consol sells some shale interests

By JOE MANDAK
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Consol Energy Inc. said Thursday that it will sell half of its interest in its Marcellus Shale holdings in Pennsylvania and West Virginia for $3.4 billion in a deal that gives Noble Energy Inc. access to the lucrative Marcellus natural gas market.

Under the deal, Houston-based Noble Energy will buy half of Consol's Marcellus development rights and existing wells in those states. The deal involves 663,350 acres that Consol has under lease in both states.

The Marcellus Shale is one of the biggest natural gas fields in the world, stretching from New York through West Virginia. It has been a hotbed of activity for energy companies in recent years as extraction of natural gas from shale deposits has accelerated with a process known as hydrofracking. While oil and gas companies insist the process is safe, environmentalists have expressed concerns about groundwater contamination from chemicals used to get to the gas.

Consol's chairman and chief executive officer J. Brett Harvey said in a statement that the two companies "will be able to accelerate the development of this significant resource safely, efficiently and economically."

Consol said it will double its Marcellus well rig count from four to

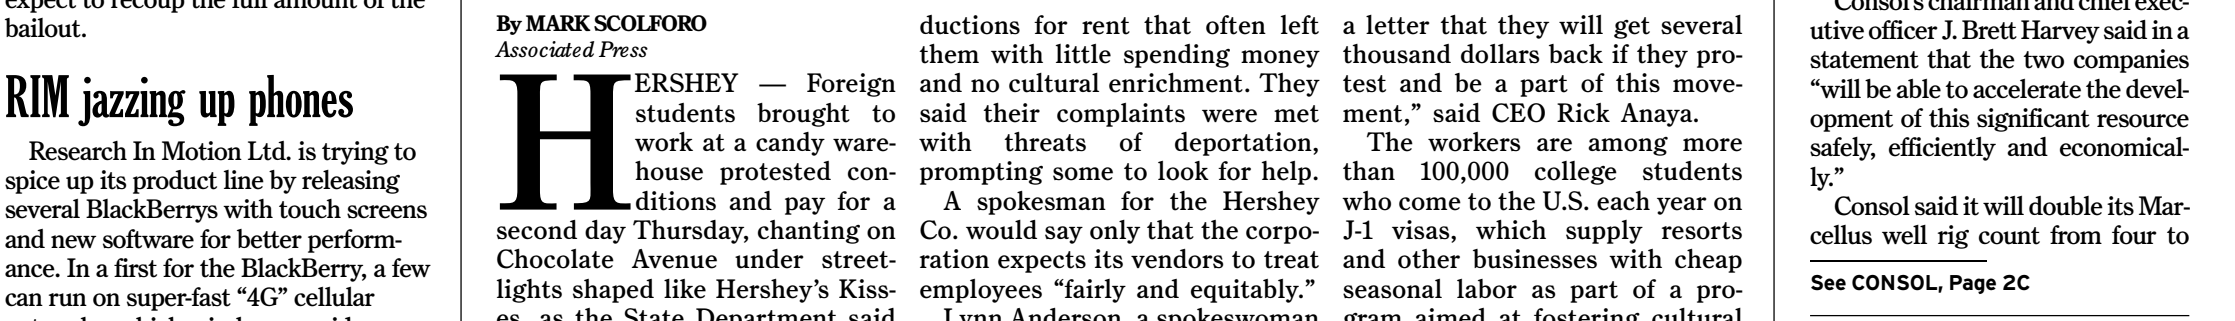
MARCELLUS VOLUME RISES SHARPLY

Pennsylvania's Marcellus Shale drilling industry is continuing to post huge gains in production.

The state's 1,632 working Marcellus wells produced 432.5 billion cubic feet of natural gas through the first six months of the year, according to Department of Environmental Protection statistics released this week.

That's a 60 percent increase over the amount of gas reported for the last six months of 2010.

Energy firms have been boosting their production targets, not only because new wells are coming on line but also because they're managing to coax more gas from each well.



Coke says it will invest $4B in Chinese market

The Associated Press

BEIJING — Coca Cola Co. said Thursday it plans to invest $4 billion in China as food brands scramble to expand in its fast-growing consumer market.

The investments will take place over three years beginning in 2012 and raise Coca Cola's total investment in China between 2009 and 2014 to $7 billion, the company said.

Global food brands are investing heavily in China, looking to a relatively healthy economy that expanded by 9.5 percent in the quarter ending in June to drive sales amid global uncertainty.

"China is one of our most important growth markets," said Coca Cola chairman and CEO Muhtar Kent in a statement announcing the plans.

Chinese retail spending in June rose 17.7 percent over a year earlier, according to the government.

In July, Nestle SA announced the purchase of a 60 percent stake in candy maker Hsu Fu Chi for $1.7 billion. Earlier this year, Nestle also bought a controlling stake in Chinese food processor Yinlu Foods Group.

Restaurant chains such as McDonald's Corp. and Yum Brands Inc.'s Pizza Hut and KFC also are expanding.

Kent said Coca Cola's sales volume in China for the first half of 2011 was double that of five years ago.

four months. This year is on pace to be the worst since the late 1990s for home sales.

• Manufacturing has sharply weakened in the mid-Atlantic states, according to a report from the Federal Reserve. Manufacturing had been one of the economy's strongest industries since the recession ended in 2009, but its growth has slowed this year.

The manufacturing news was especially bleak on an already bad day, said Dan Greenhaus, chief global strategist at brokerage BTIG. He called the Fed report "an atrocious set of numbers."

"That really set the market on its head," he said.

Wall Street and other financial markets have wrestled for several weeks with fears that a new recession might be in the offing. Morgan Stanley economists said in a report Thursday that the U.S. and Europe are "dangerously close to recession."

"It won't take much in the form of additional shocks to tip the balance," they wrote.

"We live in an environment of sell now and ask questions later. The European market was off very heavily this morning before the markets opened. But honestly there wasn't any news of any substance," said David Kelly, chief market strategist at JPMorgan Funds.The Dow is down 13.6 percent since stocks began falling July 21 — four weeks that have rattled Americans watching their retirement savings and other investment accounts shrivel.

The yield on the 10-year Treasury note briefly fell below 2 percent for the first time, hitting 1.98 percent, before rising to 2.07 percent. Low yields show that investors are willing to accept a lower return on their money in exchange for safety.

The price of gold reached yet another high — almost $1,830 per ounce. Gold keeps setting records, with some investors looking for stability and others simply looking to cash in.

The price of oil fell $5.20 to $82.38 per barrel after the economic reports raised concern among traders that demand for gasoline would fall. One survey this week found Americans have already cut back on gas 21 weeks in a row.

The rate on the 30-year fixed, the most popular mortgage, hit 4.15 percent. The last time long-term rates were lower was in the 1950s, when 30-year loans weren't even widely available.

Nicole Sherrod, a managing director at broker T.D. Ameritrade, said the market volatility has led more clients to put automatic protections in place to sell a stock or an investment fund once it falls below a certain value.

"Our clients are saying that this is not a buy and hold market," she said. "This is a buy and protect market."

eight this year. It plans to go up to 12 rigs by 2013 and 16 by 2015. Despite splitting its drilling interests with Noble, Consol still expects to meet its production target of 350 billion cubic feet by 2015.

"This transaction affirms the value we saw in the Marcellus Shale when we acquired Dominion's Appalachian exploration and production business just 15 months ago," Harvey said.

Consol paid $3.48 billion for Dominion's business in March 2010, which included approximately 500,000 acres in the Marcellus Shale.

The deal works out to about $7,100 per acre, which analysts said was "in line with what Chevron paid for Atlas Energy," in a $4.3 billion acquisition in February.

Muddy waters

Four days of relative calm in the stock market vanished Thursday and were replaced by the volatility that had sent stocks plunging since late July. Financial analysts say investors can't figure out what is happening with the economy. So they focus on whatever is the latest economic or earnings report.

Earlier this week, merger announcements from companies like Google and strong earnings from Cisco and others gave traders reasons to stop worrying about another recession. A disappointing report on manufacturing from the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia on Thursday revived those worries. "Economic data continues to be very muddled," says Rob Lutts of Cabot Money Management.

Economic and earnings reports have caused the Dow's big swings this month

AUG. 1-AUG. 10

The big worry: debt problems in the U.S. and Europe. Investors fear that Spain and Italy will be the next nations to need a bailout. In the U.S., the nation's AAA credit rating is downgraded because of concerns about the ability of Congress to cut the budget. Traders also react to two disappointing reports: Economic growth in the first half of the year was the weakest since the recession ended in 2009, and manufacturing weakened in July.

AUG. 11-AUG. 17

Earnings and economic news turns positive. Tech giant Cisco Systems says revenue could grow faster this quarter than analysts expected. A strong retail sales report suggests that consumer spending remains healthy. Google, Time Warner Cable and Cargill make merger announcements. And Target, Staples and Dell report earnings above analysts' forecasts.

AUG. 18

Economic concerns return. The number of people seeking unemployment benefits rose last week. Manufacturing is weaker in the mid-Atlantic states. Sales of previously occupied homes fall for the third month in four. Japan's exports fall for a fifth month.

INTERNATIONAL ANTIQUE BUYERS VISIT WILKES-BARRE IN SEARCH OF HIDDEN TREASURES.

Gold & Silver items including Jewelry, Coins, and Sterling items are in Great Demand as Prices Soar to Historic Highs!

David Morgan
STAFF WRITER

If you have a jewelry box with bling from an old fling, you may want to haul it down to the Best Western this week. You may be sitting on a small fortune, explains IPEB show coordinator Gary Denomme, "Today's gold & silver prices are at an all time high and it's definitely a seller's market." One broken gold chain or an old class ring could be worth a week's salary, said Denomme. "People are just amazed at what these types of items are worth in today's market. I urge anyone with gold or silver in any form to sell it right now." For the past 25 years gold has been trading at levels below $350.00 per ounce and silver at $4.00 per ounce. Currently, gold and silver is trading at many times that price. IPEB professionals will test any of your gold or silver jewelry for free, so bring it in even if you are not sure what it is.

Family cashes in on inherited sterling silverware set and walked away with a check for $1,746.00

"IT'S UNBELIEVABLE, I BROUGHT IN SOME OLD COINS THAT HAD BEEN IN A LITTLE CIGAR BOX FOR YEARS AND SOME OLD HERRINGBONE NECKLACES—IN LESS THAN FIFTEEN MINUTES I LEFT WITH A CHECK FOR $700."

Other items they will be looking at include dental gold, flatware sets, tea pots, silver platters, and anything marked .925 or sterling. Even if you're not sure what it is, bring it in and IPEB reps will test it for free.

Silver coins made before 1970 including Silver Dollars, Half Dollars, Quarters and Dimes are highly sought after as well. These coins are 90% silver and worth many times their face value. IPEB's head company, THR & Associates hosts over 4000 shows each year throughout the US, Canada and Europe. They are one of the largest companies in the country that buys directly from the public. Their shows are held in all size markets and anyone can sell directly them. "We pay on the spot," said Denomme. "It's a fun experience and you can bring in your items and leave with cash in hand just a few minutes later. Other items the group will be buying this week include pocket and wrist watches, all old coins and currency, vintage guitars and musical instruments, war memorabilia, train sets, toys, pottery, dolls, diamonds, costume jewelry. If it's old we want to see it.
